POLICE JURY TOLD REASONS

Monroe Council Firm On Rural Fires Ruling

Monroe City Council members Saturday informed the Ouachita Parish Police Jury they will not alter their decision "made nearly two years ago to stop fighting fires beyond the city limits."

Reasons were cited in a letter to T. W. Humphries, jury president, signed by all three members of the council, Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard and H. W. McSherry and W. D. H. Rodriguez, commissioners.

ADVANCE NOTICE

Monroe fire - fighting outside the city limits was halted effective Jan. 1, after the police jury had been given 22 months advance notice this step would be taken.

The police jury at a meeting Friday night voted to accept an offer by industries to pick up the tab on rural fire protection for 1965 if the proposal met approval of the Monroe City Council.

The plan called for the Monroe and West Monroe fire departments to fight fires outside city limits on their respective sides of the Ouachita River, and the police jury voted to submit the proposal to the Monroe council at a Tuesday meeting.

In the letter to Humphries Saturday, however, the Monroe council members stated the City of Monroe would not enter into any agreement for fighting fires outside the city limits. The letter follows:

"In view of statements which have been reported to the public news media during the past few days, we feel it is necessary to once again explain to you the reason for the City's action with reference to the fighting of fires outside of the City limits and the City's present position relative to fighting such fires.

"Insurance premiums charged to citizens of the City of Monroe are based upon ratings made by the National Board of Fire Underwriters after periodical inspection of the City's firefighting facilities. In 1957 the City moved from a Class 5 rating to a Class 3 rating — this the result of improvements made possible by a bond issue voted by the citizens of Monroe in 1951 and much hard work on the part of a dedicated force of firemen.

"As a result of the change in rating, insurance premiums on homes and the commercial properties in the City of Monroe were reduced by an average of 37½ per cent. In total premiums this has meant a savings of more than one - half - million dollars a year to the home and business owners in the City of Monroe.

"Since 1957 we have continued to try to improve our facilities so as to become entitled to a Class 2 rating. If this can be accomplished, a further savings in insurance premiums of approximately $200,000 per year can be attained for the property owners of the City of Monroe.

"As long as the City of Monroe continues to fight fires beyond the City limits, a Class 2 rating cannot be attained. Not only this, our present Class 3 rating is in jeopardy. Realizing this, the City Council gave notice to the Police Jury nearly two years ago that, effective December 31, 1964, the City would no longer send its equipment outside the City limits to fight fires and the National Board was so advised. The long advance notice was given so that the Police Jury, as the governing body of the Parish, could make satisfactory alternate arrangements.

"For thirty - seven years the Monroe Fire Department has fought fires outside the City. It has done so willingly and without complaint — both for the home owners as well as for the important industrial enterprises located in the Parish. Since 1951 the homes and industrial enterprises in the Parish have multiplied and increased in numbers and value many fold. Where there were cotton fields in 1951, there are now subdivisions and business and industrial establishments.

"Thus the burden of fighting fires beyond the City limits has grown by leaps and bounds. For example, in 1928 the Monroe Fire Department fought seven fires outside the City limits and traveled 72 miles. In 1959 the Monroe Fire Department

Road Employes To Help Fight Fires In Parish

Ouachita Parish Police Jury President T. W. Humphries announced Saturday that members of the parish highway department will help fight rural fires east of the Ouachita River until "a more permanent solution can be reached."

Humphries said the highway employes volunteered to perform the service and were instructed by Monroe Fire Chief H. L. Hales in the use of a fire truck that was turned over to the parish Friday.

"Though the volunteers cannot be expected to do the job of experienced firefighters, they are willing to answer calls in rural areas and do what they can to bring fires under control," said Humphries.

He added that rural residents east of the river wishing to report a fire should call the parish highway department garage on Sterlington Road, FA 3-5679. Rural residents west of the river should call the West Monroe Fire Department, FA 2-5131.

West Monroe announced Thursday that its fire department would answer rural fire calls in west Ouachita Parish until the police jury makes other arrangements.

Parish Engineer Herbert Collier assisted Hales Saturday in the instruction of highway employes and will be in charge of the volunteer firefighters.

Humphries said the police jury will discuss the firefighting problem at a meeting Wednesday morning.

MERGE PROPOSED

Air Force Wants To Stop Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force staff has recommended merging all Air Reserve squadrons into the Air National Guard. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara is expected to announce the merger next week.

The result will be a single streamlined backup for the regular Air Force — an expanded Air Guard of some 112,000 men.

The Associated Press learned Saturday that the staff recommendation was sent formally to Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert on Friday. It was due to be forwarded to McNamara promptly. His approval is virtually certain.

LEMAY AGAINST

The staff recommendation, made without reservation and after months of study, ran counter to the long-held views of Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, outgoing Air Force chief of staff. LeMay strongly opposed eliminating the Air Reserve structure.

The Air Reserve plan follows the general pattern established when McNamara announced elimination of the organized Army Reserve and its merger with an expanded National Guard of 550,000 men.

The Air Reserve Guard reorganization is intended to eliminate duplication, increase efficiency and combat-readiness. Money savings will be relatively small.

There now are about 54,000 Air Force ready reservists drawing pay for training. Sources said about 39,000 of these men, now drilling regularly with flying and ground units, will be shifted to the National Guard.

The 15,000 or so left out of this switch are individual trainees and members of recovery squadrons which already have been announced as due for disbanding as unneeded.

With elimination of the separate Air Force Reserve unit structure, the Pentagon will abolish the Continental Air Command, six regional headquarters and 16 sector headquarters.

Savings will be on the order of $10 million to $15 million a year, officials said. This is much less than the more than $200 million a year in cost savings expected from the Army Guard-Reserve merger, although most of the Army savings will be plowed back into buying new arms and equipment for the Guard.

The Air Guard, now totaling some 73,000 men, will be swelled by the 39,000 reservists.

The guard has 92 flying squadrons and 106 nonflying squadrons.

There now are more than 90 squadrons or other major units in the Air Reserve, exclusive of the recovery squadrons.

The Air guard's roughly 2,000 planes will be augmented by the more than 700 now used by the Air Reserve.

The merger is likely to rekindle the controversy which flared after the McNamara announcement on reorganizing the Army Reserve and Guard.

Some critics have contended that McNamara was waiting for LeMay's retirement before moving to merge the Air Reserve and the Guard because of LeMay's opposition.

While LeMay favored the Reserve approach, most of the top civilian officials and senior Air Force generals supported the Guard approach.

U.S. PROTESTS

Egypt Too Severe On Oil Firm Plane

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary findings from a U.S. inquiry indicated Saturday that an American plane had veered from civilian flyways and headed toward a forbidden zone when it was shot down by Egyptian fighters Dec. 19.

In disclosing this, U.S. officials continued to protest what they described as too severe action by the Egyptians against an unarmed, private oil company plane plagued by a radio communications foul-up. The two men aboard were killed.

The plane shooting is one of several outstanding issues which have strained Washington's relations with the United Arab Republic and led to mounting congressional demands for a cutoff of U.S. aid to Egypt, currently running about $140 million a year. President Johnson's aid proposals for fiscal 1966 go to Congress on Thursday.

Other recent incidents include President Gamal Abdel Nasser's speech telling the United States, in effect, to jump in the lake; the sacking of an American library in Cairo; and U.A.R. aid to Congo rebels.

U.S. policymakers figure Redwooded Egypt is strategic in the Middle East and some have been arguing for continuing aid to buttress American influence there. They note Nasser has been making amends to the library and suggest his anti-U.S. speech may have been a spur-of-the-moment outburst based on a misunderstanding of the U.S. position.

The Egyptian version of the Dec. 19 affair is that a military-type plane flew into U.A.R. territory from the direction of Israel, Egypt's sworn enemy, without advance notice, failed to heed either radio messages or visual warnings from intercepting U.A.R. MIG jets, and then headed off the civilian airlane toward the prohibited area around Alexandria.

Viet Officers In Part Meet U.S. Demand

Civilian Regains Legislative Power In New Revision

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Military leaders who purged the government three weeks ago formally restored civilian governmental power Saturday but failed to meet all the demands of the United States. American officials called the move a step in the right direction, however.

A communique said an agreement signed by Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh and Premier Tran Van Huong had placed legislative powers in the hands of the nation's civilian chief of state, Phan Khac Suu. These powers had been held by the civilian High National Council, which was dissolved by the military Dec. 20 in a bloodless purge.

FREE COUNCIL

The communique added that a national convention will be called within a short time for the purpose of shaping up a national legislative assembly. All members of the council who were arrested in the purge were ordered freed.

The United States had demanded that the military leaders step aside completely, restore the council and free all persons arrested in the purge. At the time of the purge, about a score of politicians — perhaps more — were reported under arrest.

Actually, the communique did not go much beyond what military leaders said right after their purge.

In announcing dissolution of the council on Dec. 20, the military leaders said its legislative powers were turned over then to Suu. The operational leader of the purge, Brig. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, said then a national congress would be convened by Suu in a maximum of three months. No time limit was given in Saturday's communique.

Thus, it appeared Khanh walked away with a diplomatic victory over the United States and seemed to remain the strong man of South Viet Nam.

The United States held back some of its financial aid to the Vietnamese government because the military leaders had wiped out the council.

The U.S view was that while there may have been some things wrong with the council, it was a basis for representative democracy and should be maintained.

Commenting on the communique, one source said: "All it does really is legalize what the armed forces did on Dec. 20."

Gas Grenades Halt Marchers In Canal Zone

PANAMA (AP) — National Guardsmen hurled tear gas grenades Saturday to keep about 40 demonstrators from marching on the Panama Canal Zone on the first anniversary of bloody anti-U. S. riots.

About 100 students and labor organization members started the march toward the legislative palace, across the street from the Canal Zone which was a focal point of the 1964 clashes.

National Guardsmen stopped them about a block away. The demonstrators started to disperse, but about 40 of them attempted to stand their ground. Half a dozen grenades of tear gas put them to rout, the whole area was cleared, and traffic returned to normal.

The group was among 1,500 marchers who had paraded to the National Cemetery and the grave of Ascanio Arosemena, the student who was the first to die in the rioting that took the lives of four Americans and 21 Panamanians.

The marchers carried anti-U. S. and antigovernment banners and chanted slogans. Among the marchers were persons either officially named as Communists or kown to be members of the party.

As the procession marched past the legislative plaza in sight of the Canal Zone the students redoubled their anti-U. S. chanting. At Santa Ana Plaza, a handful of marchers tore down the carnival flag raised last week. The carnival starts late in February.

Plans to carry empty coffins symbolizing the Panamanian dead did not materialize. The streets were lined with spectators on the march to the cemetery.

AMA Tells New Plan For Aged Health Aid

THOMAS W. GLEASON, left, president of AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association, and Asst. Secretary of Labor James R. Reynolds confer in New York Saturday in an effort to avert a costly dock strike. Following rejection of a new labor contract by New York's union membership, Gleason announced that the New York local would strike at 12:01 a.m. Monday. (AP Wirephoto)

Would Follow Present Path But Changed

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association unveiled Saturday a plan for health care for the aged, and stated it would "provide far more" than the Johnson administration's program.

The AMA proposal — like President Johnson's — would require congressional action. The big organization of doctors, unyielding foe of White House medicare ideas, is set to enter the legislative battle pit as opponent of one plan and proponent of another.

PRIVATE INSURANCE

The AMA plans would be based on the private insurance system and would use machinery already functioning in 40 states under the Kerr-Mills Act — but with some changes.

The Kerr-Mills Act established federal-state cooperation in health care for people 65 or over. Both levels of government put up money. States handle the administration.

"Under the new program, an over-65 citizen would purchase through the private carriers (insurance firms) a wide spectrum of medical, surgical and hospital benefits, and would pay all, part or none of the costs of the policy, depending on his income," the AMA set forth in a statement.

"For individuals with incomes under the specified minimum, the state agency, using federal-state funds, would pay the entire costs."

The specified minimums were not listed.

"Aid would consist of comprehensive health care benefits, rather than being limited to hospital and nursing home care, representing only a fraction of the cost of sickness," the statement added. "Benefits for eligible recipients would include not only payment of hospital and nursing home charges, but also payment of medical, surgical and drug costs."

Dr. Donovan F. Ward, AMA president, who outlined the proposal in the statement and at a news conference, said eligibility for benefits would be determined quickly on the basis of a "simple income statement" by applicants.

"On the basis of this return alone," the AMA said, "an individual within the limits set by the states could immediately become eligible for benefits."

The insurance policies would vary by states.

An amendment to the present law would be required. As it now stands, eligibility is determined by state welfare department appraisal of income, assets and other resources.

The program would be shifted from welfare to health departments in the states.

Under the AMA proposal, Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans and health insurance companies would provide policies protecting senior citizens against the costs of illness.

These concerns, the AMA said, would provide "experienced administration with public and private funds sharing the costs according to the recipient's income."

The AMA said its proposal would "accomplish far more than would be possible in the so-called medicare tax program."

The broad outline lacked many fine details.

Dr. Ward told newsmen that Congress will be asked to expand the Kerr-Mills Law.

Patrol Stops Indonesians' Sea Landing

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A Malaysian warship shot an Indonesian tugboat out of the water Saturday as it tried to land guerrillas only about 50 miles north of Kuala Lumpur. Sixteen Indonesians were captured. Informed sources said 40 to 50 may have drowned.

The patrol ship Sri Perak came upon the tugboat shortly after midnight as it headed toward the west coast city of Port Dickson with another boat in tow.

Officials said the Indonesians opened fire and the Sri Perak then proceeded to blast the tugboat. Of those captured, two were brought ashore on stretchers.

When the shooting stopped, no trace was found on the boat under tow and it was believed sunk, official sources said.

The Straits Times said an undetermined number of raiders landed Saturday night at Kota Tinggi, some 180 air miles south of Kuala Lumpur, and 12 were captured. Defense Ministry officials could not be reached for comment.

If the report is correct, it would be the third attempted landing by Indonesia in the past 36 hours.

Friday, two dozen raiders armed with light weapons and grenades landed on the southern tip of the mainland near Singapore and police and troops rounded up 13 with little resistance. Four of the prisoners were seized in a small boat. They were apparently trying to escape back to Indonesia.

Cold Invades; Freeze Tonight

June in January weather in the Twin Cities area ended, at least for a few days as a cold front pushed across the area Saturday. Skies today should be cloudy to partly cloudy with a high temperature of 40 to 44 degrees.

CLOUDY

FAA at Selman field recorded .60 inches of rain Saturday, as the cold wave moved across the area.

The high recorded Saturday was a warm 72 in the late morning and as the front hit the mercury had dropped to a cool 41 by 10 p.m. and was expected to drop more before sunrise today.

STARTS MONDAY

Little Hope Seen On Dock Accord

NEW YORK (AP) — Asst. Secretary of Labor James R. Reynolds tried Saturday to bridge a gap between longshoremen and their union leaders but said he saw little possibility of staving off a costly dock strike at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

"I believe a strike in the longshore industry is a distinct possibility," Reynolds said after he arrived here from Washington.

He said he carried no message from President Johnson to union and shipping officials. But he said the President was being kept informed of all developments by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz.

'GRAVE CONCERN'

Speaking on behalf of Wirtz, Reynolds expressed "grave concern" that a strike in Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports would have "a potentially serious impact on the economy of the country at a time when it is enjoying high levels of activity."

Shippers planned to ask President Johnson for congressional intervention compelling arbitration of dock workers walk off as scheduled.

The new waterfront crisis, caused by rank-and-file rejection of a new labor contract, sent Reynolds hurrying to Washington on Friday night for top-level governmental consultations, then flying back here Saturday for talks with the principals.

He described the rejection of the contract as "extremely unfortunate," and said the pact was "not only liberal in the nature of benefits" but constituted a "breakthrough" in terms of job security.

"I choose to believe," he said, "that a significant portion of the negative votes arose out of a lack of true understanding of the truly fine contract negotiated for the members."

Seven States In Icy Clutch

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A seven-state area — from Montana to Michigan and south into Nebraska and Iowa — was in the grip of a bitter cold wave Saturday.

The arctic blast pushed deep into the still unseasonably warm eastern and southern states. Cold wave warnings were up for an area from Arkansas through the Ohio Valley to the eastern Great Lakes.

The cold wave drove into Buffalo, N.Y., Saturday morning on wind gusts up to 54 miles an hour and quickly dropped the temperature from the record-breaking high of 59 degrees recorded shortly after midnight.

VIET NAM WAR

Officer Begs Help; It Comes Too Late

MY YEN, South Viet Nam (AP) — A young West Point graduate died Saturday calling for reinforcements during a Communist attack on this outpost only 10 miles from Saigon. The gunfire was heard clearly in the capitol.

Help came, but it was only from the air — and it was too late. The Viet Cong had cut off ground approaches and stymied nearby artillery support.

U.S. advisers expressed the belief that scores of other Americans with small Vietnamese units scattered in the provinces around Saigon and involved in a major pacification program are faced with the same fate.

"We have dozens of little units doing little jobs," one adviser said. "But when these units get hit hard there are not enough forces around to come to their assistance. They are on their own, like My Yen Saturday morning."

The U.S. lieutenant killed in the fight was with a 100-man unit giving security for a portion of "Operation Hop Tac," a top priority pacification project fully backed by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Viet Nam.

The Viet Cong swarmed out of the paddy fields and swept through My Yen at 3 a.m. The lieutenant, a U.S. Army sergeant later wounded, and the regular Vietnamese troops with them fought for their lives.

Barrages of Viet Cong fire preceded the attack, demolishing the old two-story French concrete villa serving as a command post.

A radio set crackled to life in the battalion command post 2½ miles away.

"We have to evacuate the building. Send in the hueys!" yelled the U.S. lieutenant. The hueys are armed helicopters.

That was the last anyone heard from him. They found his body in front of the smashed command post at daybreak, draped over a foxhole. He appeared to have been killed at close range by small arms fire.

Winnfield Man Is Accidentally Shot In Head

WINNFIELD (Special) — A 21 - year - old Winnfield man, Randel Jordan, was shot accidentally in the head Saturday about 12:30 p.m. while deer hunting in the Jordan Hills Community several miles south of Winnfield.

According to deputy sheriff, J. J. Crippen of the Winn Parish Sheriff's Department, Jordan and six to eight other hunters were on deer stands along a country road when a deer ran across the road and was fired upon by a number of the hunters.

After being struck in the forehead by a single buckshot, Jordan ran to some of the hungers and said "I'm shot."

He was driven to Winnfield General Hospital in his own car by members of the party. There X - ray pictures of Jordan's head showed the buckshot to be lodged in the back of his head.

Jordan was sent to Doctors Hospital in Shreveport by ambulance. Winn Parish Sheriff Sanford Jordan said Saturday night the wounded man's condition was reported as critical.

Frantic Diggers Attack Landslide

HOPE, B.C. (AP) — Rescuers clawed frantically Saturday at the jumbled mass of rock where "the whole half of a mountain came down" on the Hope-Princeton Highway, possibly burying one or more vehicles.

There was no confirmation any vehicles were caught by the avalanche which swept over the trans-Canada arterial early Saturday morning.

A truck driver, however, said his machine was just missed by the cascade of debris and a small car carrying three persons had been stalled in a small slide which came down just ahead of the main avalanche.

It was Dan Chervenka, 29, heading a rescue crew from Hope, who said, "The whole half of a mountain came down. It looks like a razor cut everything down."

Good Citizens

With Jimmy Hatten

The rank and file citizen of northeast Louisiana deserves recognition. Congratulations! You have put our section of the state at the top of the good citizenship ratings.

Lincoln Parish could be judged champion of the champions in that respect.

Figures released by the Public Affairs Research Council show that the top seven parishes in percentage of voter participation in the 1964 presidential election were located in the northeastern quarter of the state.

First was Lincoln with an amazing 90.4 per cent. This means that for every 10 persons registered to vote, better than nine of them exercised their privilege at the polls.

Other: Morehouse, 86.9; Richland, 86.4; East Carroll, 84.3; Tensas, 83.4; Jackson, 82.9.

But that's not all. Sixteen northeast Louisiana parishes are considered within the coverage area of the News-Star—World. Of those 16, all but three finished above the state average of 74.6.

Also ranking: West Carroll, (number 11), 82.1;) Ouachita, (number 13), 80.4; Concordia, (number 14), 79.6; Franklin, (number 16), 79.2; Union, (number 24), 76.9 and Caldwell, (number 27), 75.8.

Three finished below the state average. They were LaSalle, (number 43), 71.7; Winn, (number 51), 68.4 and Catahoula, (number 52), 68.3. Shame.

PAR notes that, "Goldwater won the state's 10 electoral votes by compiling a dominant vote in north Louisiana and coupling this with heavy support from the southern parishes.

"Although Johnson was able to win 21 southern parishes his margin of victory was not sufficient to allow him to overcome the Goldwater sweep in the north."

Continuing, the research agency says, "Goldwater completely dominated the voting in north Louisiana. He carried Tensas Parish with 89.6 per cent of the votes and Claiborne with 89 per cent."

PAR says that, "As expected, Goldwater's heaviest support came from north Louisiana where he received 76.7 per cent of the total vote cast. This section contains 27 per cent of the state's registered voters. In south Louisiana, Goldwater received 49.1 per cent of the total vote. Johnson got 23.3 per cent of the votes in the north and 50.9 per cent of those in the south.

Same old story. Out-numbered north Louisiana decided the way the state's electroral votes were cast. The analysts often cite north Louisiana attitudes in vote patterns, etc., predominately rural, protestant, conservative and what not.

They might add one more reason why north Louisiana is considered so heavily at election time — good citizenship.

Arkansas Editor Describes Role Of Newspapers

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — John N. Heiskell, 92, editor of The Arkansas Gazette, declared Saturday that a newspaper may have "to suffer affliction" if it is to be a moral force and influence in its community.

Heiskell made the comments as he accepted the University of Arizona's John Peter Zenger Award "for distinguished service in freedom of the press and the people's right to know."

Heiskell described the events in the 1957 Little Rock school integration crisis and the role his paper played.

"There was urgent need for a strong voice for public peace, for law and order and for obedience to the courts," Heiskell said. "For day after day, in front-page editorials, our paper denounced the actions that had precipitated the ragic events that bandied Little Rock's name across the country and around the world."

The editor said as a result of its stand, circulation dropped from 100,000 to 83,000 and some advertisers canceled ads.

"We did not retreat an inch," Heiskell said. "We did not retract a word. We were sure we stood upon basic principle. We rode the storm and awaited the subsiding of the inflamed and angry feeling. Calm did return, and in time so did our readers."

Heiskell, editor of his paper for more than a half century, said that there comes a time when "a newspaper may have to make the crucial choice between the safe and easy way and the hard and hazardous course that is the line of duty."

The newspaper's stand on the school integration crisis has been recognized by two Pulitzer Prizes.

The Zenger Award, presented annually for the past 11 years by the university, is named for a New York printer and publisher jailed during his fight for freedom of the press in 1735.

Taylor Watches Actor-Husband

LONDON (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor went on location Saturday in London to watch the man she says she wants to give up her American citizenship for — husband Richard Burton.

Miss Taylor, 32, went with Burton when he began work on a movie.

The London-born actress, who has dual British-American nationality, now wants to be exclusively British like Burton.

Inquiry Shows Building Errors In Thresher

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional committee which investigated the sinking of the atomic submarine Thresher said Saturday night practices and standards in some of her construction were "short of those required" for safe operation.

Some witnesses blamed the pressures to build the atomic submarine fleet speedily for the deficiencies found.

Both the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Navy said there have been substantial revisions of these and other procedures and practices in nuclear submarine building as a result of the committee and Navy board investigations.

The committee based its findings on previously secret testimony taken in hearings held at different times over the past two years. The Thresher was lost in April 1962 with 129 men aboard.

Testimony included that by Vice Adm. H. G. Rickover, pioneer in nuclear power for submarines and other navy ships, who said that:

—In recent years, "several submarines, both nuclear and conventional, came close to being lost" because of defects in design, workmanship, improper use of material and faulty inspection procedure.

—A spot check of pipe joints in the non-nuclear part of the Thresher was made before she left for her last voyage after overhaul and "if the quality of the joints so inspected was representative of all the Thresher's silver-brazed joints this means that the ship had several hundred substandard joints when she last went to sea."

Like the findings made by a Navy court of inquiry after the Thresher sank on April 10, 1962, after sailing from her building place at the Portsmouth, N.H., Navy yard, the congressional committee said the specific cause for the sinking is not known.

But the committee's report narrowed the focus of suspicion down to the method of connecting pipes which entered from the outside of the hull and which were under tremendous pressure in deep submergence.

A foreward by the committee chairman, Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., said technical specification requirements for the nuclear power compartment and for the non-nuclear part of the ship were not greatly different but adherence to the specifications was far more strict in the nuclear portion.

"It is also obvious that while nuclear power was revolutionizing the submarine as a weapons system during the past 10 years, the more conventional aspects of the submarine and its safety devices were not keeping pace with the more stringent performance requirements of greater endurance, higher speed and deeper submergence," Pastore's statement said.

"For example, the design and limited blowing capability for the deballasting system — to expel water from the ballast tanks and give a submarine bouyancy — which might have been adequate for the World War II and postwar conventional submarines were inadequate as an emergency system for the larger, deep-diving, higher-performance nuclear submarines.

"Similarly, the use of the less costly method of joining metal piping systems by brazing is questionable, for hazardous salt water lines subject to the tremendous pressures of deep depth, as compared to welding which is a more expensive and time-consuming method.

"Corrective action is now being taken by the Department of the Navy in both of these areas."

A Navy witness before the committee, Rear Adm. C. A. Curtze, deputy chief of the Bureau of Ships, agreed with the committee's view on the swift pace of the program.

Curtze told the committee that "on hindsight, following the Thresher's loss, we must in all honesty say, with respect to submarine design, we moved too fast and too far in areas of offensive and defensive capability. Submarine safety did not keep pace."

Pastore said his committee was favorably impressed with the scope of the Navy's program to improve the quality and safety of both new submarines and those already in the fleet.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

11,635 New Books Added By Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS, Ouachita Parish Librarian

During the year of 1964 a total of 11,635 new books were added to the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. Of this number 10,482 were purchased with Library funds, 580 were memorial gifts and 573 were other gifts. 7,548 of the books added were adult books and 4,087 were juvenile books. There were 2417 different adult titles and 521 new juvenile titles added. However, since our book collection is getting so old a total of 4,492 books passed their usefulness and had to be removed from the collection during the year. This left the Library with a total book collection of 97,806 volumes on January first. We had hoped to reach our goal of one book per capita in 1964, but fell short by almost 3,000 volumes. It should be reached by July first. The book collection of the Library is distributed in the branches of the Library as follows:

Branch	Adult	Juvenile	Total
Monroe	35,229	6,551	41,780
West Monroe	11,286	5,515	16,801
Bookmobiles	5,099	13,975	19,074
Anna Meyer	9,100	4,618	13,718
Carver	3,622	2,811	6,433
Total	64,336	33,470	97,806

Seventeen years ago when the Ouachita Parish Public Library became a tax-supported institution the book collection consisted of 22,823 books of which 18,789 were adult books and 4,034 were juvenile books. The growth of the book collection since that time has been truly remarkable and has been accomplished because we have always spent a higher percentage of our income for books that most libraries do.

Several interesting new books have been added to the collection in the past week. Readers of mystery stories will find two books to interest them. "A Procession of The Damned" by Tucker Wilson and "From Doom With Death" by Ruth Rendell. Both of these titles are Crime Club selections. For readers of western there is also a new book, "Bucko" written by Cliff Farrell.

The field of non-fiction has several appealing books. "You Have To Go Out" written by Erick Berry is the story of the U. S. Coast Guard and presents all of it's thrills and adventures. "Waterfowl Tomorrow" by Joseph L. Linduska is a publication of the Department of Interior and gives much food for thought in regard to the protection of our bird life. "Anvil of The Gods" by Fred McClement is a discussion of the effects of storms upon airplanes. A new cookbook is "The Complete Book of Home Freezing" written by Hazel Meyer. Two additions to the literature collection are "Story of World's Literature" by John Albert Macy and "Home Book of Laughter" by May Lamberton Becker, which is an interesting collection of American with humor.

Robert L. Duffus has written a most interesting account of his travels in Europe after retirement, which he calls "Adventure in Retirement." A most impressive addition to the book collection is "History of U. S. Naval Operations in World War II" written by Samuel Eliot Morison. This 15 volume set is the definitive history of the part the navy played in World War II. We have had many requests for this set of books and are happy that it is now a part of our Library Collection. Three books reflect different periods of of U. S. History: "Coronado, Knight of Pueblos and Plains" by Herbert Bolton, is an interesting account of the age of discovery and exploration. "Knickerbocker's History of New York" by Washington Irving is a reprint of a classic which gives the early history of New York State, "The Final Challenge" by Dale Van Every is an account of life on the American frontier in the period from 1804 to 1845.

To complete the list of new acquisitions there are three biographies, "Henry Watkins Allen of Louisiana" is an account of the life of the wartime Governor of State, written by Vincent H. Cassidy. Stephen E. Ambrose has written an interesting account of the life of "Halleck, Lincoln's Chief of Staff" and there is another volume in the biography of Woodrow Wilson by Arthur. Link called "Wilson; Confusion and Crisis, 1915-1916." I would like to remind you that the Main Library will be open this afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 P.M. for the benefit of students and and other patrons. It was not open on the Sundays following Christmas and New Year's Day, but will be open every Sunday now until Easter Sunday.

Several Injury Accidents Occur In Twin Cities

Local police Saturday investigated several accidents involving injuries.

About 10:55 a.m. Monroe police were summoned to a two-car accident in the 1400 block of Louisville Ave. and 100 feet east of North Fourteenth Street. Injured in the collision were Elvin C. Branch, 22, of P. O. Box 1631, and Kenneth Dickerson, age 13, of Eros. Both were taken to St. Francis Hospital by ambulance where late Saturday a hospital spokesman said the Dickerson youth had been treated and released and Branch was being held for observation.

Police reports indicated that the accident occurred when a car driven by a 15-year-old girl stopped in the center lane of Louisville headed east to let a car in front of her turn and the Branch vehicle collided with the rear of the girl's car.

Police charged Branch with reckless driving and charged the girl for driving without a driver's license.

An eight-year-old youth received slight bruises in another two-car mishap about 11:10 a.m. on Forsythe Avenue near North Twelfth Street.

Edward Barton Stuart, age 8, was treated by a Sterlington nurse for bruises received when a car in which he was a passenger collided with the rear end of a car turning north off Forsythe, according to police reports. The cars were headed west on Forsythe. Driver of the second car was Minnie J. Albritton of P. O. Box 5074, Fairbanks.

A 31-year-old Negro woman, Claudette Grant, of 2520 Burg Jones Ln., was slightly injured in a two-car collision at the intersection of North Nineteenth and Stubbs Streets about 2:40 p.m. She was taken to St. Francis Hospital where hospital officials reported she was treated and released.

Police charged a 15-year-old boy with running the stop sign at the intersection and colliding with the Grant vehicle.

More More

Other accidents included a pedestrian - car incident on Renwick Street and a headon collision on Roselawn. A 16 - year - old girl, was injured, according to police reports, when she ran from behind a bus on Roselawn into the path of a car driven by Waymond G. Small, 37, of 4000 Halsell St.

An E. A. Conway Hospital spokesman said the girl received emergency treatment there and was released.

A St. Francis Hospital spokesman reported Mary L. Clark of 1711 Roselawn Ave. was treated and released after being slightly injured in the headon collision on Roselawn. Police reports indicated that a car driven by Rose Bartlett of 202 Morris Dr. was traveling on the wrong side of Roselawn when it collided with another car driven by Tony Cascio, 16, of 1403 Glenmar Ave.

Louisiana Solon Forecasts Busy Congress Days

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., said Saturday that while he is opposed to some of the administration's proposals he expects most, if not all, of President Johnson's program to be enacted this year.

Ellender said he feels that "we are on the verge of a very productive session" and that President Johnson will be able to use his knowledge of the legislative processes to make the year a rewarding one.

"When I believe that he is in the right, I will do anything possible to aid him in achieving his objectives," he said.

Ellender pointed out that "over the years and particularly in the last election, the ranks of those who might be counted on to oppose certain features of the Democratic president's program have been seriously depleted."

He added:

"I express the hope that the vacancies have not been filled with members of Congress who no longer feel it necessary to study each package of legislation carefully, in the light of their own beliefs on what is right or wrong."

Ellender, in a talk for broadcast in Louisiana, said that in the president's State of the Union message he found a great deal "with which I could both agree and disagree."

Toward a number of the president's proposals, he said, he holds serious reservations and would await details.

He added: "We shall be able to get a closer look at just what he has in mind when the national budget is presented to the Congress later this month.

"As for now, I find it difficult to believe that all of the new and expanded programs the president has referred to can be put into action without a substantial increase in the federal expenditures."

U.S. Wins Points But Victory Goes To Khanh

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, commander of the Vietnamese armed forces, scored a diplomatic victory over the United States Saturday and emerged once again as the strong man of South Viet Nam.

A communique signed jointly by Khanh, Chief of State Phan Khac Suu and Premier Tran Van Huong purported to turn all power over to the civilian government — a point for which the United States had pressed.

It also provided for the release of all political prisoners — about 14, counting four members of the defunct High National Council — locked up in the military purge of Dec. 20. This had been another American demand.

But the United States initially had called for two other important points.

The embassy here wanted the generals to backtrack on the dissolution of the High National Council, South Viet Nam's provisional legislature.

More important, the United States wanted guarantees that the military would not step in again, overturning more successive civilian governments.

Neither of those conditions was met in the communique.

An embassy spokesman grumbled that the communique left much to be desired but seemed to be the basis for a Vietnamese government with which the United States could deal. In diplomatic language, this meant the United States would lift its implied threat of the past three weeks to cut aid to Viet Nam.

The communique did not specifically reassert civilian authority over the armed forces but merely said that the Aug. 27 communique by Khanh which first turned power over to the civilian government was still in effect.

That communique presumably was in effect Dec. 20 when Khanh virtually topped the government.

Two days after Khanh's purge, he issued another order of the day saying his junta's actions were "proof of the armed forces' good faith: they have respected their Aug. 27 pledge to turn power over to a civilian government."

In the same order of the day, Khanh in effect told the Americans that if they didn't like what he had done they could pull out and let Viet Nam make its own way.

The further reference Saturday to the Aug. 27 communique obviously was not what the Americans had had in mind.

Not only was the High National Council permanently dissolved, but Huong and his Cabinet were left with no legal basis to rule the nation other than with Khanh's agreement.

Both Huong and Suu were appointed to their posts by the High National Council that Khanh dissolved, and their sole authority for governing stemmed from the council.

Perhaps as an added fillip to make clear who was boss, Khanh called Huong to his headquarters at Cap St. Jacques Friday night for the final joint conference on the communique. Regardless of circumstances, this clearly was not in keeping with protocol, which dictates that the armed forces commander go to the premier.

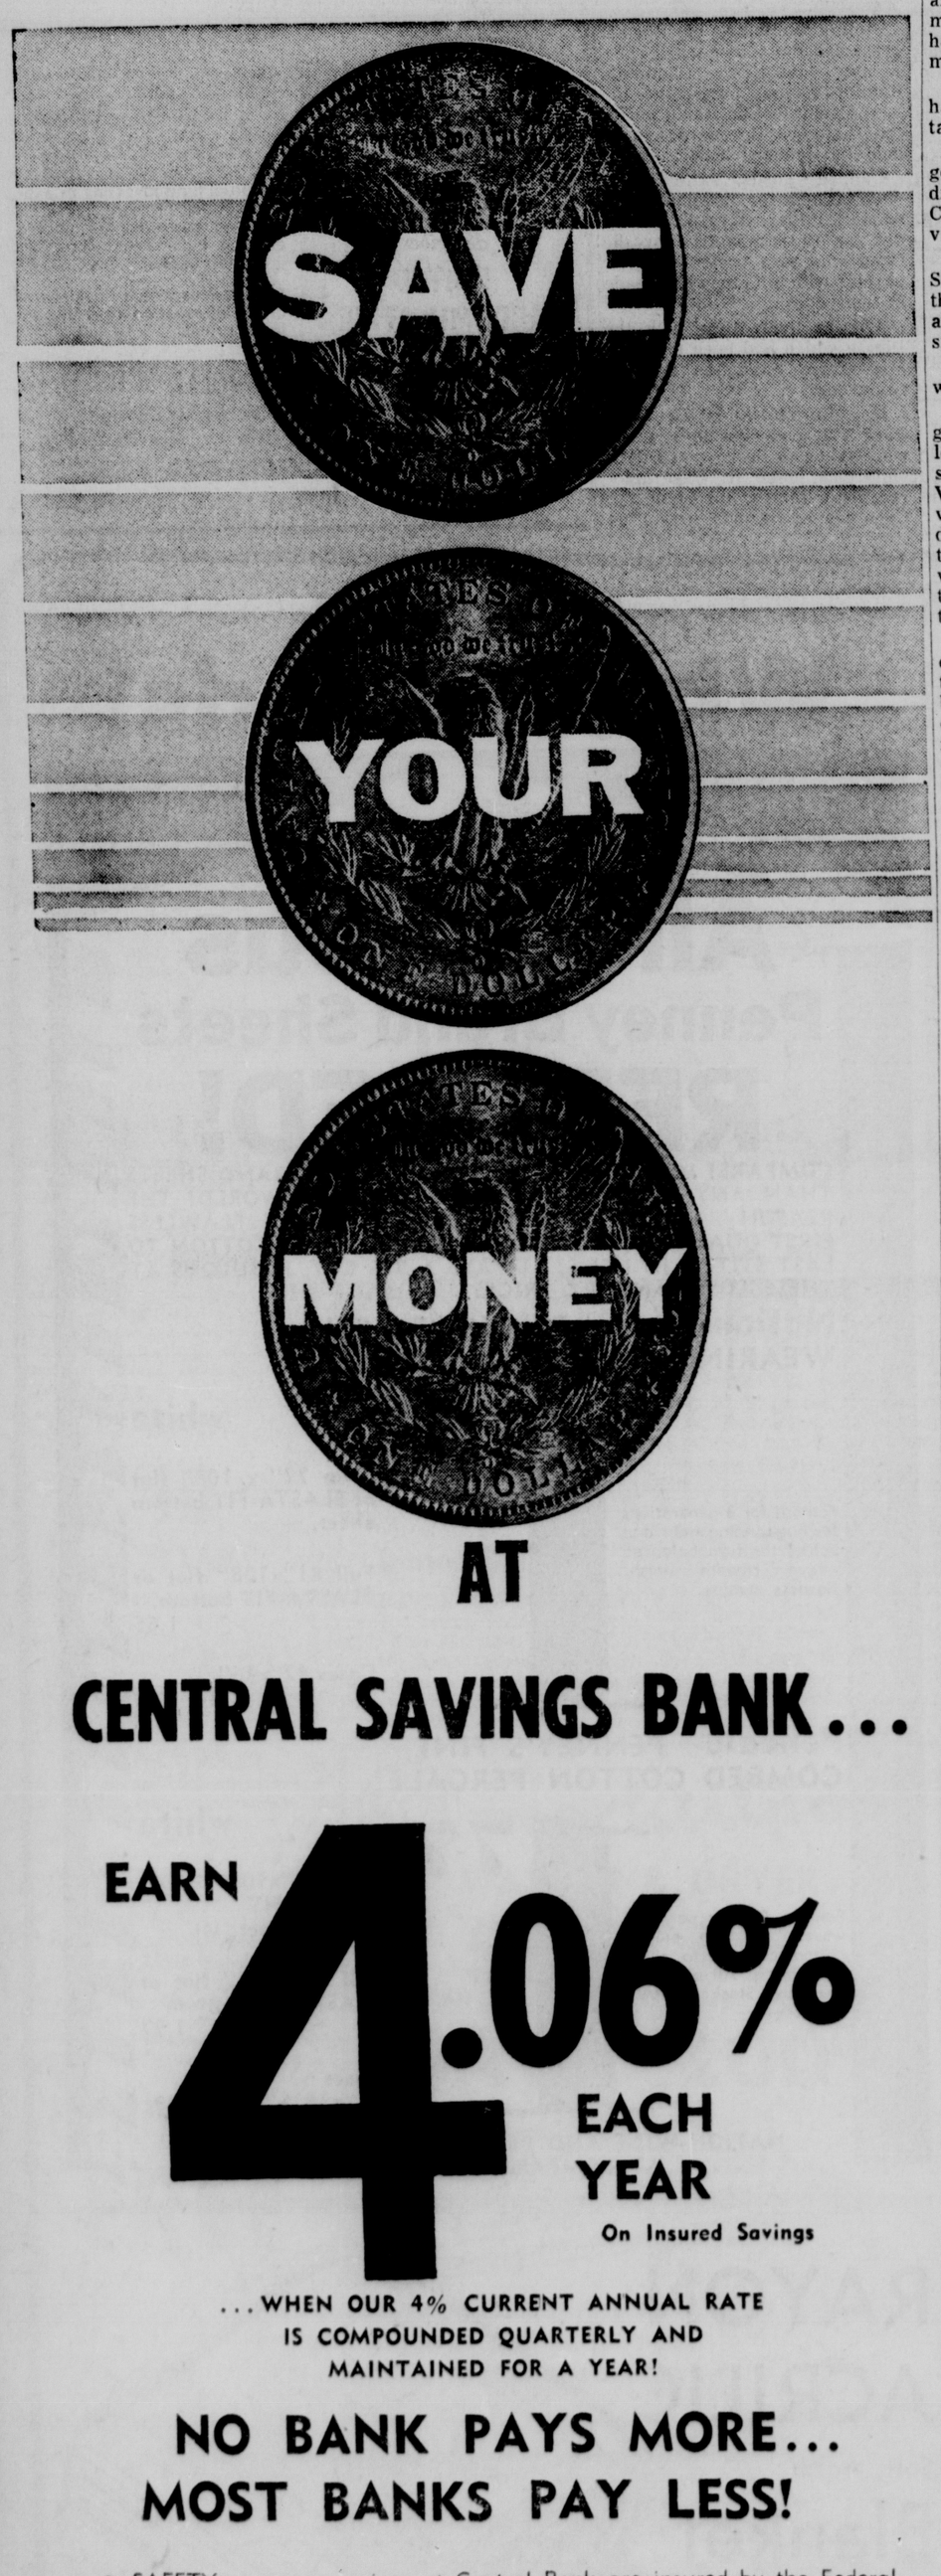

The bitter antagonism that developed between Khanh and U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor, who have not met since Dec. 20, is supposed to have been allayed as the result of conferences between aides of the two men.

"But relations between them will never be the same again," a confidant said.

Viet Nam faces a new phase of political crises, as an entire new start is made to crank up some kind of government. There is certain to be intense jockeying for seats on the new legislature, whatever form it takes, renewing the political strife and even rioting of the past year.

The army, in its self-appointed watchdog role — vigorously opposed by the United States — may step in again and again.

On paper, the crisis was over. In reality, the crisis had merely gone from one stage to another.

Area Parish Progress In 1964 Noted

By ROWENA LOWREY Correspondent

JONESBORO — In reviewing the progress of Jackson Parish in 1964, it can be noted that the parish has come a long way expansion - wise in the past 12 months.

In the first months of the year, the Pumpkin Center -Hilltop Water System Inc. was completed. This non - profit water system cost about $143,000, and supplies approximately 170 families with an ample supply of good water. There are two wells, one 105 - foot tower with a 30,000 - gallon capacity and one well, on top of the ground, also having a 30,000 gallon capacity. This will be paid for from revenues collected each month for the water.

The Jimmie Davis Tabernacle located near Quitman, on the Beech Springs Highway, is nearing completion. Many tourists have visited this place of worship. This includes people from almost every state in the union. The tabernacle, built by Jimmie H. Davis, former Governor of Louisiana, and a native of Jackson Parish, cost in excess of $200,000. Funds came from donations. Dedication of the building is anticipated in the spring of this year.

The Hearne Motel, located in the Knob ill sub - division, destroyed by fire last February, has been rebuilt.

Jonesboro Municipal Airport was completed last April.

As a result of a $1,275,000 bond issue in 1960 - 61 being approved, many improvements are anticipated for the town of Jonesboro. These include three oxidation ponds, new generating plant, and the laying of lines for an improved water system. A new water tank is also being constructed.

Drilling is being started on a water well in Clay, which will supply residents of this northern Jackson Parish village with an adequate supply of water. This project is being done at a cost of $15,000 obtained from the Farmers Home Administration.

The village of Quitman has been granted a loan of $63,000. The projects to benefit are four miles of water main lines, water meters, a hydropneumatic pressue system, with a 30,000 ground storage tank, and development of two deep water wells Work will begin soon.

The first bank ever to be built in Hodge, the Hodge Bank and Trust Co. is nearing completion. The cost will be in excess of $100,000.00.

The new educational building and chapel of the Jonesboro First Baptist Church has been completed. The new construction and improvements totaled $178,000.

$40,000 WORTH

Ruby, Other Jewels Still Being Sought

NEW YORK (AP) —A $40,000 ruby and lesser jewels were still being sought Saturday in the wake of recovery of major items from the astonishing cat burglary last October at the Museum of Natural History. But a high source voiced belief the ruby would be found unharmed.

The source, close to the situation but declining to be quoted by name, would not say what led to his belief in recovery of the ruby.

It is known as the DeLong Star Ruby, a 100-carat gem about an inch in diameter. The museum says it is "translucent, milky crimson, and gives off reflections of a star within the gem."

The jewel came from the ruby mines of Burma and was presented to the museum in 1938 by Mrs. George Bowen DeLong.

The authoritative source discounted published reports that the ruby and 14 other items still missing were being held as a sort of ransom to insure that the three accused burglars get leniency.

The three are Florida beach boys Allan Dale Kuhn, 26; Jack (Murph the Surf) Murphy, 27, and Roger Clark, 29.

They were arrested within 30 hours of the museum burglary on the night of Oct. 29-30, but steadfastly maintained their innocence.

However, Kuhn accompanied detectives to Florida this week on a mission which resulted in recovery of the fabulous Star of India, the world's largest star sapphire, plus eight other gems of high value.

It seemed apparent that he was bargaining for leniency for himself and his pals.

The picture is rectangular, full, bigger, with a natural shape similar to color movies. All other color sets commercially produced in America today use a round tube with the old-fashioned shape of black-and-white tubes of 10 years ago.

Motorola's new rectangular tube is more compact. This makes the cabinets trim and slim enough to blend beautifully with other room furnishings. They fit closer to the wall than ever before possible with color sets. We offer Color/65 in an interesting selection of cabinetry, and you'll find our prices unusually low on each distinctive model.

The performance of these new sets is so dependable they're backed by manufacturer's full year guarantee that covers free exchange or repair of any tube or part proven defective in normal use. Arranged through us, labor extra. All sets have hand-wired chassis, hand and dip soldered for high reliability. It's today's set with the look of tomorrow. See Color/65 here now.

THE REALM OF COIN

You Can't Own All Of Pieces

By JOHN BLUCH

It was a frustrated coin collector who was credited with the remark that "a coin collector must specialize unless he has the resources of the Federal Reserve available."

How true that is! A glance at all the coinage of the world since the first coins were struck in Lydia more than 2700 years ago quickly shows the collector he can't own all of them — or even a small part of the total types struck by all the mints in all the countries. That is one reason why American collectors usually start with an continue to collect United States coins. But sooner or later a degree of specialization must enter the picture for the U. S. collector.

He can collect by series, by type, by mint; confine his interest to colonial or territorial coins; limit his collection to gold or silver coins or cents; assemble a set of silver dollars, or decide any of dozens of other specialties are for him.

Collectors who specialize in the bust-type coins of the 1700's and early 1800's have an opportunity to assemble a collection of great interest to collectors and non-collectors. They could begin with the 1792 Disme (only three pieces known) or Half Disme and continue through all the denominations: half-cent, cent, dime, half dime, quarter, half dollar and dollar. Included would be such rarities as the 1792 Brich Cent, liberty cap half-cent and cent types, including the "no pole to cap" and "pole to cap" varieties.

Many of these early bust-type coins before 1800 are beyond the reach of the ly if he is a date collector. Because of the unreliable technology of the times, there are literally hundreds of types of these early coins. Dies often broke or developed cracks before more than a few coins were struck, and collectors list as separate varieties those with die-cracks of progressively greater size.

We bave heard of one Louisiana collector who is trying to assemble a bust-type collection, but he is limiting his efforts to the turban head type. These coins include half-cents, cents, dimes and half-dimes, quarters and half dollars. Many of the coins are reasonably priced in fine condition, but there are certain dates which are extremely scarce and command impressively high prices.

Many type set collectors find that they lack even the common date turban head dimes, half-dimes and quarters in the better grades, and it is a lucky collector who has a turban-head quarter in very fine or better grade dated prior to 1831. In 1831 the size of the coin was reduced and mintages increased sharply. Prior to 1831 the large quarters were struck in relatively small numbers and few are available to the average collector. Because mintages were low and the few that were available circulated for long periods, there are extremely few still around that grade better than fine.

Dealers who cater to the well financed collector usually have a few nicer coins, but they come high. Most collectors of modest means must be content with good average collector, especially if he is a date collector. or very-good grades for their type sets.

Unfortunately for the silver dollar collector, there were no turban head dollars struck. In this series the mint issues stooped with the flowing hair type in 1803. A few proof specimens of the famous Gobrecht piece were struck in 1836 and then the seated liberty type started in 1838. This type continued until 1873 when the series was again interrupted until 1878 when the familiar Morgan dollar issue began.

Naturally, there are many varieties within all the bust type series, and the average collector can not expect to accumulate all of them. But he can assemble a mighty impressive type collection of these coins. If his pocketbook is unlimited, he can put together a real show stopper of a type collection or series set. Most collectors who are familiar with this series, however, would be quite content to have just one of each type in very fine or better.

With the edge apparently having been taken off the investment boom, some of the money which went into rolls, bags and barrels of coins might now be diverted to more stimulating channels. We would recommend bust type coins for the disenchanted investor who would like to impress his collector friends.

Tuesday night is the big special auction for junior collectors at the Monroe Area Coin Club meeting. This is the special session planned last fall for juniors throughout Northeast Louisiana, and the youngsters should have a rare opportunity to pick up coins for their collections which ordinarily are not available to them.

Plans call for the auction to be limited to juniors only (collectors under 18 years of age). If you are a junior, plan to attend. The meeting starts at 7:30 in the First National Bank, West Monroe.

BRONZE BUST

HELSINKI (UPI) — A bronze bust of Dr. Albert Schweitzer by sculptor Kalervo Kallio will leave soon for his jungle hospital at Lambarene for presentation on Schweitzer's 90th birthday Jan. 14, it was announced Saturday.

Squadron Sets Formal Dinner For Wednesday

RUSTON (Special) — O'Donnell Squadron of Louisiana Tech's Arnold Air Society has planned a formal dinner at the Student Center here at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Described as a "dining-in" event, it will provide an opportunity for officers to see how ceremony and tradition play a part in the life of an Air Force unit. It also affords an occasion for officers to meet socially at a formal military function.

The dining-in is further described as a means of saying farewell to departing officers and welcoming new officers and recognizes individual and unit achievements.

The guest list includes Dr. F. Jay Taylor, president of Louisiana Tech; Dr. Virgil Orr, dean of the college; Col. F. L. O'Brian Jr., chief of staff for the Second Air Force at Barksdale, and Lt. Col. J. C. Scollard, information services officer for the Second Air Force also at Barksdale. Colonel O'Brian will be the guest speaker.

Dr. Taylor will be honored for his contributions to the Arnold Air Society and Tech's AFROTC unit. He will receive honorary membership in the O'Donnell Squadron.

Tech Student Gets Fellowship

RUSTON (Special) — Robert Earl Puddy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Puddy of 1301 Davis Blvd., Ruston, a graduate student at Louisiana Tech, has been awarded a graduate research fellowship of $1,200 by the Louisiana Heart Assn.

The fellowship is accompanied by a grant of $828.56 for a "Study of Plasma Albumin" in deer mice under Dr. Selma Patton of the Tech chemistry department.

Puddy will seek information as to the chemical nature of the molecules that make up the albumin group of blood plasma proteins. He will deal with one phase of a large scale research project now in progress by the Tech departments of chemistry and zoology.

GENERATION OF DOERS

Monroe Morning World
SUNDAY FEATURES
Monroe, La. January 10, 1965 1-B
Editorials Spotlight Sports

The United States has a large generation of young people on the move, some seeking adventure, others solid achievement, and still others concerned with causing strife. AP Educational Writer Hodenfield describes it as a "generation of doers."

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The silent, the apathetic, the gray flannel younger generation of the 1950s has moved on to some obscure niche in history.

In its place is a new-generation of doers, of impassioned young men and women who want desperately to make a difference.

It is big — 46.6 per cent of the total U.S. population is age 24 or younger.

It has courage — the Mississippi Project is continuing proof of that, even to those who most violently oppose the civil rights movement in that state.

It has compassion — by the tens of thousands these young people are offering their help and their love to the children of the slums.

It seeks a commitment in the political life of the country to try to help shape its destiny.

Most of all it has a determination to change the world it will one day inherit.

MANY RALLIED

Traditionally, of course, the younger generation has always talked about changing the world. This particular one is doing more than just talking.

From the day the late President John F. Kennedy created the Peace Corps by executive order on March 1, 1961, young Americans by the thousands rallied to the challenge. The volunteers have served in the jungles of Africa, the native villages of India, the teeming slums of South America, the disease infested swamps of Panama.

The Northern Student Movement founded at Yale University in June, 1962, began its activities with a tutorial program for slum children. From a small beginning on the Eastern seaboard, students on virtually every college campus and in many high schools are now aiding disadvantaged children in New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Los Angeles, and such smaller cities as Wichita, Kans.; Albuquerque, N.M., and East Palo Alto, Calif.

College students from the North and West focused the eyes of the world on Mississippi last summer when they invaded the state to work for Negro civil rights. They stayed on, despite the murder of three colleagues and almost daily verbal and physical abuse.

While the doers are a minority in today's younger generation, it is always the active minority which gives a generation its tone, whether it be "jazz age" or "upbeat."

FERMENT FOR CHANGE

It is true, of course, that today's generation has its wild ones, its delinquents, and they often hold stage center. But there is also a real ferment among youth for change and betterment.

The Collegiate Press Service, an agency of the U.S. Student Press Association with correspondents on many campuses, reported recently:

"Students on campuses in all parts of the country have staged a rash of demonstrations and protests on a wide array of national, international and local issues, and no let up seems in sight."

The one major reason, the press service added, probably is the civil rights movement. This movement, which involves large numbers of politically active students, convinced many of them that non violent demonstrations could be an effective device on the campus. It also served to make them more sensitive to their own civil rights.

Remember what was said about the youth of the 50's?

"He wants very little because he has so much, and is unwilling to risk what he has," said a Gallup Poll. "He is old before his time; almost middle aged in his teens."

Others said it wasn't a reactionary generation, it was "inactionary." The youth of those days was considered too self-satisfied, and too willing to take but not to give.

These descriptions hardly fit today's youth.

In Phoenix, Arizona, Carol Peluso, 22, is working her way through Phoenix College as a beautician, and working virtually full time as national committeewoman for the Young Democrats.

"I've been involved in politics since I was 17," she said.

"Why? Well, if I say it's because I want to do something for my country it sounds corny. But if anything happens to me — if I died — I wouldn't have accomplished anything at all. I'd have just been here and gone.

"In politics you can work for people — for more jobs, better housing, better schools. You can get things done.

POLITICAL COSTS

"My work in politics cost me at least $1,200 in 1964, counting lost wages. And politics is the reason it took me three semesters to become a sophomore. But I can do it, so it becomes something I must do."

In Washington, D.C., Tom Pauken found something he could do and therefore had to do.

Tom, 20, from Dallas, took badly needed time from his studies at Georgetown University last fall and worked long hours for the Young Republicans.

"I became active in politics in 1960," he said, "but it really goes back to the Hungarian revolt of 1956. I was only 12 at the time, but here were 17 and 18 year olds fighting for their freedom. I was very disturbed that we did nothing to help them.

"Since World War II, communism has been advancing all over the world, and the United States has failed to respond to that threat. I feel our leaders have failed to see communism for the very real threat it is.

"If there is anything I can do, I have to do it."

There are about 4,000 young people in Illinois alone serving as volunteer tutors to disadvantaged children.

BEST TUTORS

"The best tutors are the bubbling coeds and the madras clad Joe Colleges," said Stephany Creamer, 22, a long time volunteer in the Chicago slums. "The long-haired 'thinkers' come once or twice, and then quit."

Mary Zeno, 22, class of '64, University of California at Berkeley, joined the civil rights movement in Mississippi last summer and decided to stay through the winter.

"The popular image down here is that we're all a bunch of bums, beatniks and prostitutes," she said in an interview.

"Can you imagine a bum, beatnik or prostitute coming to Mississippi at risk of life and limb, just for an ideal? Not those people."

The marked difference between today's younger generation and those which have gone before may stem, as Dr. Harold Taylor has said, from "the circumstances of their birthtime."

Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College and a frequent visitor on college campuses, wrote recently that today's youth "missed the Great Depression, the Nazi Fascist movement, the second World War, McCarthyism and the Eisenhower era.

"They sprang directly, uninhibited by history, into a time when the moral issue of freedom for the colored races, in America and in the world, and the moral issue of peace against war, life against death, gave them clear alternatives for taking sides.

"You could be for freedom and against the tyranny of whites over blacks, you could be for peace and against war, for social progress and against the status quo, without becoming entangled in the ideological chains of either pro or anti communism."

Whatever the forces that stifled the youth of the 50s, the civil rights movement has given many of today's young men and women a rallying point, a cause, a reason for being.

Now, in the Northern states, this movement will take a new direction - organizing the poor and giving them the means and techniques of exerting political pressures.

Two student groups involved are moving slowly now, but getting ready for fireworks in the coming months.

READY FOR FIREWORKS

The Northern Student Movement, the group which started the tutorial projects and collected money for civil rights workers in the South, has chosen two states for demonstration projects next summer. One is in the Midwest, the other in the Northeast, but neither has yet been publicly identified.

Target areas may include seven or eight cities in each of the two states. The projects probably will include school boycotts, rent strikes, and community centers operated by and for the slum neighborhood presidents. The community centers, like those established in Mississippi, would serve as a focal point for community action.

Dan Schechter, communications director at NSM headquarters in New York City, said in an interview:

"The civil rights movement has been ineffective to the degree that people aren't organized to demand those rights. The poor themselves must become concerned and demand what is theirs. The poor people must participate in the process of change.

"This may not be as dramatic as some other demonstrations, but we feel it is the most significant thing going on. We're trying to change the whole composition of the civil rights movement."

AFFILIATED BRANCHES

NSM now has more than 70 affiliated branches on Northern college campuses, and executive secretary William Strickland estimates that 3,000 to 4,000 young people are involved.

Because this is a generation of youth driven by a need to act, to participate, to make their voices heard, there are young men and women impatient and sometimes angry with the slow tide of human affairs.

Ann Cook is one of the angry ones.

Ann, 24 and a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College, has been tutoring slum children for nearly two years. Now she is director of the Student Woodlawn Area Project on Chicago's South Side.

"Tutoring projects aren't the answer to the education problems of urban youths," she said in an interview. "I see them as an indictment of the status quo.

"There is going to have to be real time, money and thought spent on urban education. There has to be a change on the part of school administrators. They're going to have to decide that these slum children are really worth getting to.

Mary Zeno in Mississippi is bitter, too.

"Most Americans misunderstand what we're trying to do down here," she said.

"We haven't come here to help the Negro become white. The Negro kids don't want to go to an integrated school just to sit next to a white child. Forced integration isn't the issue — the issue is poverty and poor education."

But many people ask, why invade Mississippi? Certainly there must be racial problems to help solve at Berkeley, Calif?

"Sure, there are racial problems in Berkeley," she said. "Racial problems aren't unique to Mississippi, or the South.

"But there are other people in Berkeley and in all the Northern cities who can work for civil rights and equality. In Mississippi, there is no one to do the job. We had to come here. Someone has to do it. And if we don't do it, who will?"

DISENCHANTED

Some young men and women, without bitterness, have become disenchanted with the environment they knew so long.

Such a young woman is Marcia Rogers, 26, of Rickton, Mississippi. Marcia was at the University of Arizona, preparing for a Peace Corps assignment in Panama.

"I was frustrated in Mississippi," she said. "I couldn't work in civil rights there. This was a way to escape. If I had been active in civil rights at the University of Southern Mississippi, the university probably would have found a way to get rid of me.

"My parents don't share my views on integration. But I have no right to jeopardize my family's safety, or its economic welfare. I have always been a liberal. But some of us who are liberal are cowardly, too."

LIKE MANY other of today's college students, Martha Wesley, 21, of Rogers, Ark., is interested in helping other people, not in money. Here she works with a child at the Institutes of Logopedics, University of Wichita, Wichita, Kans. A senior at the institute, Martha is studying speech and hearing therapy to prepare herself for work with handicapped children. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Fiction's Grande Dame

By DAVID ZINMAN

The critics seldom have been kind to Frances Parkinson Keyes, but among her 47 books have been 19 best sellers, and sales are well over 20 million copies and still going.

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — In the gracious Southern setting of camellias and a fountain patio, the words that have created 47 books still flow from the pen of Frances Parkinson Keyes.

Six hours or more a day, seven days a week, the 79 year old widow writes in her blue lined notebooks. She keeps two secretaries busy near her study, once a slave quarters, in antebellum Beauregard House.

When she is not writing, she is in Spain or France, or the mountains of Peru, immersing herself in the locale for a new book.

All this — despite the fact that she is lame and arthritic and plagued with insomnia, and that she has already turned out 19 best sellers.

"Why don't I retire? Why don't you ask a doctor why he doesn't practice? Or a lawyer why he doesn't take any more clients?" she says.

"This is my chosen profession. This is my livelihood. This is the thing I can do. Writers have one great advantage. Their work gets better and better. Age is no handicap."

A heavy set, gray haired woman whose Yankee years emerge in her New England accent, Mrs. Keyes rhymes with "busy," has the air of a grande dame.

HOSPITABLE

Rings of emeralds, diamonds and pearls bejewel fingers of both hands. She is hospitable and friendly as she chats in the restored home of Confederate Gen. P. G. T. Beauregard.

But a visitor finds it difficult to be at ease. It is a regal hospitality, an aloof friendliness.

Are there any regrets in the long, bountiful literary career, a visitors asks.

"I almost never have had good reviews," she says, a note of puzzlement in her voice.

"The critics have never taken me seriously."

"Why, I don't know why. You might also ask me why I have never had a book made into a movie."

Hollywood has not turned any of her intricate, full blown novels into movies - although television and radio have done adaptations.

PRAISED DESCRIPTIONS

Although book reviewers have never regarded Mrs. Keyes as first - rate, they have praised her vivid descriptions of the world of wealth and gentility.

By and large, they have found her characters cardboard, her dialogue stilted, her plots rambling.

One critic wrote:

"To read a Keyes novel is to enter an enormous ballroom decorated with expensive good taste where a number of generally kind people . . . rotate in elegant costumes and whisper to each other interminable stories of family entanglemens. It is never too clear just what is going on."

The public goes right on buying her books.

Her books have sold well over 20 million copies. France and Spain-settings for some works - have honored her with medals. In 1964, she was named outstanding U. S. Catholic woman.

"I have decided," Mrs. Keyes said, "You can't have every thing. I have quite a large following, been translated into 14 languages, had a success with serialization in magazines and with book clubs. I have to dismiss Hollywood and the reviews."

Criticism was with her from the start.

Born at the University of Virginia to a transplanted professor of Greek from Boston, she was married at 18. Her husband, Henry Wilder Keyes, became governor of New Hampshire in 1917 and later U. S. senator for three terms

She moved to New Orleans some years after her husband's death in 1938.

"When I started, everyone made fun of my writing," she said. "Neither my husband nor my mother had any confidence in it. So I wrote in secret. I hid it in the attic.

FIRST BOOK

Her first book, "The Old Gray Homestead," was published in 1918. Success was elusive.

While she reared three sons, she kept filling up her bluelined notebooks. She wrote 16 more books without hitting the best seller list.

Finally, in 1936, she climbed to the charmed circle with "Honor Bright." Every novel since has been a best seller-although only one, "Joy Street" 1950, has ever led the list.

"I have never known a man who made a success of his first book who was able to keep that up," Mrs. Keyes said. "If fame comes early and easily, it doesn't seem to last."

Her attention to feminine details in her novels - they include "Came a Cavalier" 1947, "Dinner At Antoines" 1948, "The Chess Players" 1960, and her latest "The Explorers" 1964 - have attracted women readers.

AUTHOR OF 19 best-selling novels since 1936, Frances Parkinson Keyes, now 79, continues to write. She is seen here holding her latest novel, "The Explorers," at her home in New Orleans. She moved there after her husband's death in 1938. She lives in a restored pre-Civil War mansion. Critics have been unkind, but readers, especially women, have bought more than 20 million copies of her books. She has written 47 in all. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Sam Rubin

So much of what people are able to accomplish during the years allotted them is measured in tangibles. We think of the many things a business and civic leader does and proceed to list these as accomplishments.

In the case of Mr. Sam Rubin, whose unexpected death Friday took him from a still active life in the community, we could list much.

But more outstanding in our memory is the manner in which Mr. Rubin went about his tasks, many of which took him far afield from his particular business. Whether serving customers, sitting on civic or organizational committees or engaging in recreational activities, he made lasting friendships.

He owned and operated a store in Monroe for 42 years. He was a member of Congregation B'Nai Israel, a veteran of World War I, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the 40 & 8, the Monroe Rotary and Lotus clubs.

For the past 27 years, he was a member of the Monuments Commission charged with the care of World War I memorials. This capacity and American Legion duties took him as far from his home community as Paris France, where he was chosen to assist in conferring honorary Legion membership on Prime Minister Georges Pompidou in 1963.

No wonder, then, he earned the name of "Monroe's ambassador without portfolio" in civic and service organizations.

Those who were close friends and members of Mr. Rubin's family realize best, however, that he needed to take no long voyages in order to cement warm and lasting relationships. His asset of good will was always close at hand, and his loss will be felt keenly in the whole community.

New Governor's Optimism

For the most part, the business of the Louisiana chief executive has been politics over the years. Since he left the office in 1944, former Governor Sam Jones has worked tirelessly to sell Louisiana's potential in natural resources and industrial locations to the state and nation, so in this respect he is an exception to the general observation above.

Now Governor John J. McKeithen has probably broken all precedent by leaving the state relatively early in his four-year term for the specific purpose of putting Louisiana's best foot forward in the field of industrial relations.

Certainly, the state has its problems. Not the least is the money blocked by a Supreme Court ruling in the still unsettled tidelands oil case. The whole issue of the fall special session of the Legislature and the implementation of the school teachers' pay raise rests to a great extent with this money.

But Governor McKeithen did not take this unsettled case with him on his recent trip to Washington and New York. It was, rather, the more independent attitude of a person with assets to offer instead of a somewhat desperate peddler pleading to sell what he had for a bargain.

As a result, the optimism was contagious. According to a telephone interview Wednesday, a New Orleans newspaper reported McKeithen as saying: "The nation's industrial leaders are singing our praises. Instead of being talked down, we are being talked up all over the country now."

While the state's chief executive was not out to enter the business field directly, Seymour Weiss of New Orleans, a member of the board of the Louisiana Department of Commerce and Industry, said the governor's foray into New York got the Pelican State "five or six of the hottest industrial prospects I've ever seen."

Apparently, Governor McKeithen gave a short talk to a group of industrialists at a luncheon gathering during which he listed the advantages of the state.

He did not pinpoint any of the industrial prospects, but Eugene Sullivan, president of the Borden Chemical Company; Richard McCurdy, president of Shell Chemical Company, and George Champion, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank attended the meeting.

In other words, this was a notable piece of diplomatic work on the part of the governor, and he is playing it with wise restraint.

He says he plans similar junkets in the future — perhaps to Chicago and the West Coast. But he also indicated he will spend as much time as possible in his office in Baton Rouge.

There's no guarantee than any particular location in the state will ever be traced directly to the governor's good will trips. But judging from the general tone of optimism among the people who attended the luncheon meeting in New York, we feel one highly important turn of events has already taken place. The image of the poor-boy state with the outstretched hand went down the drain — right where it should have gone a generation ago.

We Could Stand This

Most people might be a little-angered at receiving a bill when they owed nothing, even if the notice said they owed nothing, but if notices kept on coming saying they owed nothing, it would be different.

That is what happened in Bergen Op Zoom, in the Netherlands. A student studying there on a tax-free scholarship received a summons to pay his tax. The summons said he owed nothing, so he ignored it. Later, he got a reminder which usually costs the recipient eight cents but it said he owed nothing in taxes, plus nothing for the reminder. Next, the government sent a distress warrant, which usually costs 30 cents. But it said the student owed nothing in taxes and nothing for the warrant.

When the student called tax officials, they blamed it on a computer they said had gone berserk. Handlers mistakenly put the student's name in the computer, which puzzled a while and then sent him the bill for no taxes.

Computers these days are getting the blame for all kinds of mistakes. When these computers send a bill, however, which says the recipient owes no taxes, we are on its side and begin to wonder if, after all, man has made a machine with more than human intelligence.

The 3,500-word Magna Carta in Latin was translated into English and read to King John by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

South Arabia's population, of which no census ever has been taken, is estimated at about one million.

Excessive speed continued to be the number-one killer on the nation's highways in 1963. More than 14,000 traffic deaths were directly attributable to speeding.

Tribalism — which has been condemned as a fortress of primitivism and praised for enriching the national cultural pattern — still is a vital force in Africa.

Supt. Hall's Reelection

West Monroe, Louisiana

To the Editor:

The Ouachita Parish School Board should be commended for the re-election of Superintendent Milton C. Hall to a full term as superintendent of the Parish schools.

Superintendent Hall has proven by his efficient successful leadership in serving out the unexpired term of another good superintendent, W. W. Ward his ability to continue the progress of the Parish schools.

I have been amazed at the marvelous progress the schools have made the past 12 to 15 years. I simply do not see how it has been done.

For more than a dozen years Superintendent Hall has been a part of this advancement of our schools, serving 11 years as assistant superintendent.

President B. A. Tarver is also a good man with a desire to serve the best interest of all the people, as is vice president, Roy C. Cash.

Not any member of my family or relatives are on the pay roll of the Parish School system, so I have written the above without a personal interest of any kind. Just hoping to call attention to the good leadership of public servants doing a good job in a truly great work.

DR. PETER J. STEINCROHN

Treatment Helps Syndrome Victims

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I hope you will get around soon to writing again about the premenstrual syndrome. I think I am a candidate for the club. For a few days every month before my period I am a Horrible Harriet. I'm looking for help. My doctor says he can. — Mrs. D.

Comment: Before many of my reader-friends tag me as a Horrible Harry for using the term Horrible Harriets in describing women who are at the mercy of their glands before their menses, let me raise my protective shield: many women who suffer from premenstrual tension realize how trying they are on their husband and children — and have used more severely descriptive phrases in identifying themselves.

I think the chief clue is that the normal sweet-tempered Sue has a complete reversal in temperament for a few days every month before her period. This should make her, and her doctor, suspicious of premenstrual tension. There are other symptoms: emotional, physical and mental. In some form or other, they affect from 50 to 90 per cent of menstruating women. One of the commonest signs is weight gain and bloating. (Clothes don't fit.)

The symptoms may affect social relations: Cause resentment in husband, fear in children, and dismember long friendship relations. They may cause passionate outbursts with actual physical attacks on the innocent. They may reduce judgment on the job. The symptoms may arise in practically any part of the body: heart, lungs, stomach and intestines, kidneys, skin, etc.

MANY UNAWARE OF CAUSE

Such patients may come to their doctor completely unaware that the apparent trouble in the heart or lungs or skin is actually due to premenstrual tension. Likewise for an attack of sinusitis, severe headache, depression, acne or extreme weakness. Often, the condition aggravates already present disease like migraine, psoriasis, arthritis, epilepsy, asthma, psychoses.

As you can see, diagnosis is most important. Once on the wrong track, the patient suffers unnecessarily for years — and so do others associated with her.

In a study of 614 patients, Alice I. Macaulay, M.D., Clinic Director of Grasslands Hospital, Valhalla, N.Y., found that under treatment all symptoms disappeared in 41 per cent (252 patients). Results were good in 45 per cent (276 patients). Only fair in 8 per cent (49). Of no help in only 6 per cent (37).

HERE WERE SOME of her results: Bloating and weight gain affected 100 per cent of the group (86 per cent improved). Depression affected (12 per cent improved.) Abnormal appetite or sleep pattern affected 10 per cent. (80 per cent of these improved.) Dysmenorrhea (painful menstruation) was relieved or reduced in 72 patients.

Treatment is prescribed to be taken from three to 10 days before expected menstruation. There is a choice, depending upon your own doctor's judgment: diuretics (to remove excess fluid and control weight gain); tranquilizers and sedatives; stimulants such as coffee or amphetamine; hormones as indicated; psychotherapy.

I think, Mrs. D., that this "should give you the picture" and bring comfort to many other innocent sufferers.

Dr. Steincrohn's leaflet, "How to Overcome Tension and Fatigue," will be mailed to you on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 15 cents in coin for handling. Address your request to Dr. Steincrohn, in care of this newspaper.

Dr. Steincrohn is sorry he cannot answer readers' letters. Nevertheless, most questions are answered in later columns.

MILITARY PAY RAISE — A new pay raise for the Armed Forces totaling between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000 annually is in the offering. Spokesmen for the military forces are strongly insisting that they are getting "second class" pay as compared with other employes of the Federal Government and with persons in the civilian economy, with resulting costly quits, resignations and low reenlistment rates. Navy League, lobbying hard for the pay raise, says there is a loss in the Department of Defense of taxpayer's investment of over $3,416,484,000 annually, because of the loss of trained personnel.

BUSINESS AND LABOR — Leading Congressional Democrats think President Johnson's State of the Union speech has gone a long way toward keeping the support he has had from both labor and business. Big labor has wanted above all else to see the State right-to-work laws nullified and this President Johnson unequivocally promised through repeal of Section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Law. The President also made it plain he expected medicare passed, social security liberalized, minimum wages broadened and increased and other legislation which labor wants. For business men he promised that measures will be undertaken to keep the boom going. How long the President can keep labor and management in working harness remains to be seen, but his efforts so far have been successful.

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Republican Party Sets Up Funeral

EVIDENCE MOUNTS that the Republican Party is planning to attend its own funeral. With every press conference, new faggots are piled on the pyre, preparatory to the meeting of the Republican National Committee in Omaha come January 26. Ironically, the so-called liberal faction, which is doing its best to oust Dean Burch, the national chairman, will be the biggest loser if it succeeds in its efforts.

In short, if the GOP liberals muster the votes to expel the Goldwater forces from the national committee, there will be a split from which the Republican Party cannot conceivably recover. Despite the Goldwater defeat, the precinct and county levels of the party organization are still strongly pro-Goldwater. A Chicago Daily News poll of the delegates to the 1964 Republican convention shows them to be overwhelming in favor of Barry Goldwater and for retaining Mr. Burch in his present post.

In the past, the Eastern liberals spoke for the party — and ran it — while the conservatives swallowed hard and did as they were told. The 1964 convention was not so much a Goldwater vote-of-confidence as a conservative revolt. If the Eastern group is able to stampede the national committee in Omaha there will be a mass walkout and the first serious effort at organizing a third party since the days of the Bull Moose.

THE LIBERALS, of course, ridicule this possibility. They have always argued that the conservatives "have no place to go" if they secede from the Republican Party. But this writer can report that there is more than sentiment for a walk-out should Mr. Burch be handed his eviction notice.

Without naming names or giving details, I can also report that specific plans are being made for a new party which will seek to polarize conservative strength in the country. It is even rumored that should Mr. Burch be given his walking papers, the conservatives will move to take over the party machinery and its funds.

The Republican National Committee, thanks to the contributions of Goldwater enthusiasts, is solvent — a departure from other election years when it has wound up its campaign millions of dollars in the red. Those funds, the feeling is, should be spent to further the political ends of the contributors — not turned over to the liberal squatters, however "legal" their title to the national committee.

Mr. Burch is not yet out — by a long shot — but those who back him are insistent that any moves against him are really aimed at Republican conservatism. They feel that with Mr. Burch and his associates gone there will be neither room nor quarter for conservatives in the top party councils. Both these presumptions are reasonable, given the history of liberal exclusionism in the party apparatus.

OBSERVERS HERE recall that under liberal chairmen, the national committee has shown a marked hostility to conservative principles and conservative action. Its function as the focal point of opposition to the Democrats has withered away. What good, it is asked, will it do us to serve as water boys and fund-raisers for a political group which would rather see us in he..?

That a split may well follow a Burch ouster is recognized by many party leaders. Both General Eisenhower and the House-Senate minority leadership — Representative Gerald Ford and Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen — have been waving plans which presumable will mollify the conservative wing of the GOP by giving it some representation.

Both the Eisenhower and the Ford-Dirksen plans call for councils which will "really" run the Republican Party. Conservatives will have token membership in these councils. But both plans are meaningless. The councils proposed would, it is said, make policy and unify the party. They would have nothing behind them of real consequence except for the Republican membership in Congress. The vitally important party machinery would still remain in the national committee's control. And if that body and its chairman are robbed of all other functions, you may be sure that organizationally the GOP would suffer.

The plans are being announced in the hope that the liberals, scenting a juicier prey, will forget about Mr. Burch. So far, this strategy has not succeeded. Unless the Republicans decide that suicide is not a proper parlor game, we are in for a bloody clambake.

BASCOM TIMMONS

Sea-Level Canal Interest Mounts

Although no legislation is required by the present Congress on the proposal to build a new sea-level canal to supplement the outmoded Panama route there is already a surprising amount of interest in the matter in Congress.

Many steps must be taken. It is estimated that engineering surveys authorized by Congress will require three years. The negotiations with Panama, Nicauragua, Colombia and Costa Rica, giving the United States an option to build the canal at any one of four Central American sites, may be long and arduous.

President Johnson announced in mid-December also that the new treaty would be negotiated with Panama for operating the 50-year-old canal.

Perhaps the majority of Senators and Representatives believe that eventually the decision will be to build the second canal in Panama. But this is by no means certain to happen.

It was pointed out by President Johnson that there are four possible routes — two in Panama, one in Columbia and one passing through Nicaragua and a corner of Costa Rica.

There is at least one member of Congress who is a strong advocate of the Nicarauguan route. He is Representative Barratt O'Hara, Democrat, Illinois, oldest member of the House. O'Hara perhaps knows more about this dream of the 19th Century than any living man. In less than a month it will be 70 years since O'Hara first saw the then building Nicarauguan Canal. As a boy of 12 in February, 1895, he was permitted to accompany General Ludlow and Admiral Walker who made a final study of that route.

O'Hara insists that only the opposition of the railroads prevented the United States taking over and completing of the Nicaraguan Canal. At the turn of the century the Panama route found a strong advocate in United States Senator Mark Hanna, Ohio, who managed the two winning Presidential campaigns of William McKinley.

So strongly did Hanna urge Panama that its opponents referred to it as the "Hannama Canal." And then Theodore Roosevelt brought about the building of this artery.

Another question to be settled is whether nuclear underground explosions will rip the giant trench which would form the route of the canal. It could undoubtedly be built much more economically if this could be done.

Representative Armistead Selden, Democrat, Alabama, who has given the subject much study, thinks a revision of the test ban treaty will probably be necessary before nuclear devices can be used in the digging of the new canal. Selden estimates that studies to determine a site for a new sea-level canal between the Atlantic and Pacific will require up to 3 years and that after negotiations with Central American countries are completed construction will take up to another 15 years.

Then insofar as nuclear assistance in construction of the big ditch is concerned the Atomic Energy Commission has not yet made sufficient tests to determine whether the job could be done this way.

There has been relatively little discussion of the probably cost of the sea-level canal. Some estimates have been that if it could be done by nuclear explosion the cost might be as low as $500,000,000 and that digging by conventional methods might run up to from 10 to 20 times that amount.

There have been some estimates that the Panama Canal will be usable for some purposes until the year 2000. Other estimates are that it will not be usable beyond 1985. But Panama, with its complicated locks, could be put out of commission by sabotage. As of today it cannot handle the biggest of the aircraft carriers, ore transports or tankers. To that extent the canal which was an engineering marvel a half century ago is so inadequate that the time is approaching when the question of a new canal will have to be given high priority.

The World In Focus

Entrance Of Great Society

By John Cale

How To Succeed

THE 89TH CONGRESS began to form for its opening session in Washington before all the noise of the nation's New Year's celebrating had died down. The Congress itself promises a little noise of its own, too in the wake of the overwhelming victory handed the Johnson administration at the pools last November.

Mississippi and South Carolina have already seen party punitive action in regards to the non-support of Representatives John Bell Williams and Albert Watson, respectively. Both lost committee chairmanships. The Louisiana Democratic delegation seems destined to fare well enough in the coming era of the so-called "great society," however.

SENATOR RUSSELL B. LONG of Louisiana won the job of Senate Democratic whip, formerly held by Vice President-elect Hubert H. Humphrey. Contenders against him were Senators John O. Pastore of Rhode Island and A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma.

LONG

Two ballots were taken. On the first, Long received 34 votes, Pastore 20 and Monroney 14. On the second, there were 41 for Long, 25 for Pastore and 2 for Senator Philip A. Hart of Michigan.

The two Kennedy brothers — Edward of Massachusetts and Robert of New York — walked together into the Senate chamber for the opening ceremony.

Long's victory came on the second ballot at a closed-door meeting of the 68 Democrats, who will far outnumber their 32 Republican opponents in this session.

THE CONFERENCE unanimously re-elected Senator Mike Mansfield, as Democratic leader and Senator George A. Smathers, D-Fla., to the No. 3 post secretary of the conference.

Long came within one vote of winning the whip or assistant leadership post on the first ballot.

Under the procedure used in the voting, where there is no winner, the low man drops out, narrowing the field in the next ballot.

Long told newsmen after the closed session that he anticipated no difficulty in supporting the program of President Johnson in the 89th Congress.

HE SAID he considered himself a liberal on economic questions "which I believe is the way liberalism ought to be defined."

"Some people," he added, "define it on racial issues, and on those the people in my state think differently from those — in other sections of the country."

Long voted against key administration measures in the preceding Congress, including the test ban treaty, Social Security health care, and civil rights. He also has fought for years to slash foreign aid bills.

But he said today he looked for no new civil rights legislation in the next two years and that he was certain a health care measure would pass the Senate this year as it did in 1964.

In Politics

IN CONTRAST to the battling among House Republicans, GOP senators quietly and unanimously re-elected their leaders.

Senator Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois was returned as floor leader, Senator Thomas W. Kuchel of California as assistant leader or whip, and Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts as conference chairman.

HOUSE REPUBLICANS chose Representative Melvin R. Laird of Wisconsin as chairman of their party conference, a post given up by Michigan's Gerald Ford who challenged Indiana's Charles Halleck as GOP House leader.

HALLECK WAS tossed out of the House leadership post just six years after he himself had engineered a coup that had unseated his predecessor Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts.

Utopia Now

PERHAPS THE idea of "government by the people" had some meaning to the earlier Americans who knew only too well what government over the heads of the people signified.

But the theme of "government with something for the people" entered the political arena in Europe just about the time Abraham Lincoln was calling for safe and sane self-government in the United States. The idea of something-for-nothing — with the next generation picking up the tab, we presume — doesn't die easily.

So President Johnson faced the microphones and cameras Monday evening of last week with a lengthy message outlining the schedule and plans of the "great society" which is to be. He did not, as past Presidents have done, dwell on conditions to date, either domestic or foreign, which have developed over the past several years.

JOHNSON

WHILE THESE points were touched upon, the President told Congress and the nation he wants a big new education program, a substantial cut in excise taxes, increased attacks on poverty and disease and another round of civil rights Legislation.

But even as Johnson called in his State of the Union message for increased attention to problems at home, he opened the door to face to face talks with the new leaders of the Soviet Union by suggesting they visit the United States. He said he wants to make visits of his own this year to Europe and Latin America.

The President was interrupted 57 times by applause, much of it from the Democratic side of the aisle. There was one burst of approving laughter and one shout of "Atta boy!"

DECLARING THAT Americans and Russians must "come to know each other better" if they are to live in peace, Johnson said:

"I hope the new Soviet leaders can visit America so they can learn about this country at first hand."

To emphasize that this was no idle remark, administration sources disclosed that, a few hours before Johnson spoke, the Soviet Embassy was approached informally on the idea. It was learned Johnson would be ready to give favorably consideration to an invitation to visit the Soviet Union.

THE PRESIDENT said the United States seeks peaceful understandings with the Soviet Union and gave the view that the West no longer faces a single threat — from Moscow — but many threats of differing intensity that "require different attitudes and different answers."

Blueprint For Paradise

GENERALLY, THE outlook is bright for most of Johnson's program. He has the votes in the 89th Congress and will work with Democratic majorities bigger than any since the heyday of the "new deal" in 1936. Even the House parliamentary roadblocks of previous years were all but erased Monday when the Democrats changed the House rules.

Hospital care for the aged is bill No. 1 in both the House and Senate. The $1 billion measure to aid poverty-stricken Appalachia, a replay of a bill which did not make it during the 88th Congress, was not far behind on the agenda.

Democratic leaders predicted that this time medicare would be pried out of the Ways and Means Committee, where it has stuck fast in previous years, and passed by the House in a hurry.

SENATE REPUBLICAN Leader Everett M. Dirksen to call it "a glowing blueprint for paradise."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield termed Johnson's goals attainable. House Speaker John W. McCormack labeled it "truly a great message" and the new House Republican leader, Representative Gerald R. Ford, said there could be little argument over the goals — just over how to achieve them.

Cloak And Dagger

AT THE VERY moment President Johnson was calling for closer cooperation with the Soviet government — a theme that was harmonized by pleasing chords among Democrats generally and even the upward moving stock market — the Federal Bureau of Investigation was closing in on a former member of the U. S. armed forces for selling secrets to the Russians.

FBI DIRECTOR J. Edgar Hoover identified the man as Robert Glenn Thompson, a self-employed fuel oil distributor from Bay Shore, Long Island.

THOMPSON

The FBI accused Thompson of furnishing information on military installations, missile sites, code books and intelligence activities of the U. S. government in conspiracy with a Russian national.

Hoover said Thompson was paid various sums of money, utilized code name and fictitious identities and employed codes and secret writing to communicate information to the Russian.

He said Thompson conspired with Fedor Kudashkian, a Russian national and other individuals.

KUDASHKIAN

ACCORDING TO Hoover, Thompson was recruited into the Soviet intelligence operations while he was with the U. S. Air Force in Berlin in 1957.

The FBI said he once was convicted by a summary court martial while on duty with the Air Force for leaving his duty post, for unlawful possession of a .38 caliber revolver and for intoxication.

Shifting Chaos

WHILE A committee of U.S. diplomats, Vietnamese military officials and politicians tried to piece together a new government, the scene in Southeast Asia shifted to a still more confused situation between Malaysia and Indonesia.

In Saigon, South Vietnam, Americans were optimistic that some kind of compromise soon may settle the political crisis of the past three weeks, in which discussions on new American military and economic aid have been halted.

The outlines of the new government were expected to resemble closely those of all the old attempts in the past 15 months, but with some new faces in new jobs. Chief of State Phan Khac Suu and Premier Tran Van Huong apparently will remain in charge.

IN THE United Nations Security Council, Ambassador Radhakrishna Ramani, head of the Malaysian delegation, gave that notice in a letter to the council president for January, Ambassador Liu Chieh of Nationalist China.

He explained that he was doing so because of a heavy Indonesian military buildup on the Indonesia Malaysia border in Borneo and Indonesia's announced intention to withdraw from the United Nations.

Ramani said the buildup of Indonesian regulars and reinforcements had been going on for the last several weeks, particularly opposite Sarawak.

IN A war-like reply, President Sukarno declared that Indonesia "has walked out of the United Nations."

He told cheering crowds at a rally that Indonesia also is pulling out of the U.N. specialized agencies such as the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Health Organization. These agencies have earmarked about $50 million in aid for Indonesia.

Sukarno promised that Indonesia will continue his crush Malaysia campaign.

Recognition

ALMOST UNNOTICED among the events of the week was the anniversary of the German chancellor who held that post following the 12-year dictatorship of Adolf Hitler.

ADENAUER

Although the elder statesman, Konrad Adenauer, who was 89 last week, held the office longer than "der fuehrer" of the 1930's and '40's, and channeled the energy of the German people along far more constructive and prosperous lines, his leadership apparently failed to capture the imagination of writers and opinion makers.

Even today's small fry are versed in such terms as "SS," "Gestapo," and the not-to-be-forgotten "Sieg Heil."

BUT WHO ever heard of the Schumann-Adenauer coal and iron pool, a piece of diplomatic and economic cooperation between France and Germany the world never thought would come to pass?

We choose odd things and people with which to load our memories.

STILL CLOSER to home, Louisiana Governor John McKeithen was in New York last week hunting "jobs for our people and money for our economy." Accompanying the governor on the industry-hunting trip were state Attorney General Jack Gremillion and McKeithen's executive secretary Gus Weill.

McKeithen was the luncheon guest of Howard Rambin, a fellow Louisiananan and board chairman of the Texas Company.

AFTERWARDS, the governor entertained about 75 of the nation's industrialists at his suite in the Waldorf-Astoria Towers. He told them about the industrial potential of Louisiana and invited them to share in it.

TWIN CITIES WEEK IN REVIEW

Blazes Plague Rural Ouachita

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

In mythology, fire was a blessing brought to Man by the titan Prometheus. In and around the Twin Cities last week, however, fire was almost a curse.

Six homes, in a span of less than two days, were consumed by flames, the blazes resisted, at best, only by unprofessional "bucket brigades."

Where were the firemen? That question was the heart of the week's main story, a story of numerous developments, spurred perhaps by the rash of fires.

TYLER

Those homes, unfortunately, were located outside Monroe - West Monroe city limits, in areas left unprotected, after Dec. 31, when an agreement for rural fire-fighting with the City of Monroe expired.

Their loss, among other things proved conclusively that untrained hands, however willing, armed with pails of ditch water, are no match for fires, and that there's no substitute for skilled professionals.

The lesson seemed taken to heart. Previously aware, no doubt, of the "protection gap," but snarled in a network of technicalities and disputes over what type and how much was needed, the Ouachita Parish Police Jury shifted to higher gear.

ABOLITION

They'd met Tuesday and voted to abolish the parish-wide rural fire district they'd created last December, over the objections of members who wanted both east and west Ouachita districts. Next to be contended with a question of whether the district legally could be eliminated by the jury, requiring an attorney general's opinion.

Representatives of two industries had appeared at the meeting, asking to be exluded from the fire district and placed into industrial districts.

As it turned out, the district couldn't be abolished and industrial districts formed within it after its formation couldn't be exempted. So matters stood when the jury met again Friday as fire district commissioners, and accepted the industries' offer to finance fire protection, throughout 1965 if necessary, on an east-west split basis.

The week ended with jury representatives preparing to meet the Monroe City Council next Tuesday, in hopes of persuading them to make men and equipment available, with industry picking up the tab, to fight east Ouachita fires.

Meanwhile, West Monroe had taken the ball. City officials announced a decision Thursday to provide free temporary protection to rural homes in west Ouachita.

But all the week's news wasn't confined to the arena of fire protection.

Both the Ouachita Parish and Monroe City School Boards met Tuesday and they always catch our attention. Being the first sessions of 1965, these were inordinately newsy.

Superintendents' elections headed the agendas, with both incumbents — Parish Supt. Milton C. Hall and City Supt. Van D Odom — returned to office with flying colors, by acclamation.

For Hall, it marks the first full four-year term, though he's had 11 years experience as assistant superintendent. He took office about 18 months ago, when Supt. W. W. Ward resigned to take a state civil defense job. For Odom, completing his 13th year, experience was no object. They're both, in our humble opinion, top school men and the fact no opposition appeared to challenge either seems to bear us out.

Tuesday was the occasion also of parish board elections and again acclamation was the order of the day, this time favoring President B. A. Tarver, ward three, and Vice President Roy C. Cash, ward five. Though it sounds like an echo, we must note that in these cases too, better choices seem hard to conceive.

UNITED

The parish board, while sharp divisions have occurred in the past, appeared to key the new year on a note of unity. In other business, they set for bidding Feb. 2 three major projects, expected to total in value, approximately $200,000. One of them was the heretofore controversial conversion of the old Ouachita gym into a new board office building. The poll on that matter was unanimous, though five members asked that they be recorded as not voting. Unanimity was unblemished on both other items — an approximately $20,000 cafeteria addition at Swartz, and six classrooms, expected to cost about $90,000 at Richwood (Negro) School.

There was unanimity on the selection of a new head football coach and athletic director for Ouachita Parish High School, although the vote followed a 45-minute executive session. Named was Ouachita grad Mark Boatright, who'll come here from an assistant coaching assignment at Mount Pleasant, Tex.

The resignation of West Monroe High School's coach, Cecil Pirkey, was accepted and put into immediate effect. Filling of his spot is deemed likely at the board's next meeting, and a raft of applications, including some of the area's leading lights, plus several from out of state, already are on file.

And there's more from the parish board. The long-awaited report on parental complaints of communistic and other unfavorable influences radiating from the national PTA was rendered by special committee head J. H. Trousdale Jr. Like ancient Gaul, it was divided into three parts: the evidence did not seem to bear out contentions that any of the officials are communist; parts of the group's official publication were deplored as not representing the majority opinion in Ouachita Parish; and a declination to repudiate the organization in toto. The matter of disassociation with the national group was said best left to individual chapters.

OTHER ITEMS

Scanning other items of moment:

Monroe lost one of its most revered residents Wednesday when death claimed 75-year-old Ran L. Phillips, long-time superintendent of Louisiana Power & Light's Sterlington plant until retirement five years ago and a leading light in the field of engineering. He was an achnowledged expert in the production of steam electricity.

Mayor W. L. Howard reported that, depending on architects' progress, Monroe officials may call for bids at their meeting next Tuesday on the planned city hall complex, part of the city's massive $11¼ million capital improvement program. The ultra - ultra structure will blend a city hall, a police headquarters, a courtroom and a jail, and enable officials to bid a fond but welcome farewell to the stoutly - serving, though mighty tired seat of government in use for, lo, these many years. Howard also reported the planned start of work tomorrow on re-roofing the Selman air terminal, another part of the total undertaking.

West Monroe Mayor J. Allan Norris became ill on Wednesday. Only recently returned from about seven months recuperation, due to a heart attack last Jan. 26, the mayor was taken to Glenwood Hospital after becoming "hot and sick" at a business meeting. Fortunately, the first impulse of friends, to suspect another heart seizure, proved mistaken and the ailment didn't seem serious. At all events, he was released after two days of observation.

Four local education leaders announced plans to attend a meeting in Alexandria next Wednesday of school officials from four Congressional Districts, including the Fifth. The four — Parish Supt. Milton C. Hall and School Board President B. A. Tarver, City Supt. Van D Odom and Board President J. H. Scogin Jr. — will be briefed by state chiefs on the possible effects of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 on Louisiana educational procedure.

BAND

The drive to raise about $6,000 to send the Ouachita Parish High School marching band to LBJ's inauguration in Washington got a healthy stimulus when the parish school board underwrote $2,000 of the sum at its Tuesday meeting. There's still a long way to go, however, and funds are needed badly. The unit has the opportunity to be the state's official band representative on the historic occasion, as Neville was several years back. The invitation arrived just before Christmas, leaving bandsmen little time for the customary fund - raising through work projects.

The Monroe-Ouachita Regional Planning Commission re-elected its officers to new terms Monday — John I. Neel, chairman; O. C. Roddey, vice chairman; and Cotham Haddad, secretary.

Full - day classes got underway Monday at the new Catholic St. Frederick's High School, as the institution completed its move from downtown St. Mathew's, now closed.

And as a final note, a sad one, work was proceeding, all too rapidly for some locals, ourselves included, in the razing of Central Grammar School in downtown Monroe. A beautiful, turreted old structure, but badly-deteriorated and long-abandoned, the school is yielding its choice location to a planned city park. There's something indescribably melancholy about the wrecking of something so fundamentally worthwhile as a school, particularly one representing as Central Grammar does, many years of patient devotion to a hope for human betterment.

SUNDAY POEM

I believe in the cry of the tempest
'mid the thunder's cannonade.
I believe in the sun and the moon;
I believe in the flash of lightning,
I believe in the night-bird's croon.
I believe in the rock and sod,
For in all of these appeareth clear
The handiwork of God.

FROM READERS

It's always nice to hear from readers and we are indebted this week to Mrs. Sadie E. Shipp for sending us a poem we like very much. We also appreciate the nice things expressed in the letter.

Here is the poem by Josiah Gilbert Holland, called "God, Give Us Men," and certainly we need the type of men with the attributes expressed:

God, give us men that Time like this demands.
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking.
Tall men, sun crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking.
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds;
Their large professions, and their little deeds
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps;
Wrong rules the land and waiting justice sleeps.

IT HAS been said that the only person who listens to a family argument is the woman next door.

REAL EXPERIENCES

Some people believe newspapermen's lives are made up of only interesting experiences. Mostly this is just the Hollywood version. But occasionally, an experience comes up that's unique to say the least. Read what happened to a Memphis newsman the other day.

Seems the telephone rang the other day and, there being nobody else around, obediently picked it up and said hello.

"Mrs. Blank, please," said a brisk female voice.

"You must have the wrong number," said the newsman. "There's no Mrs. Blank here."

"Oh?" A note of suspicion crept into her voice. "Well what number is this?"

"I don't know. It doesn't say."

Suspicion changed to triumph. "Then how do you know it's not Mrs. Blank's?"

"Lady," said the newsman, "if it is, she lives in a funny place. I'm speaking to you on the emergency telephone in the Federal building elevator, between the 10th and 9th floors, going down."

NYSTAGMUS

Watch out for nystagmus — that is if you drive a car — after even only a couple of drinks.

Mrs. Rita Charlebois, an expert on the effects of drinking, says nystagmus — an irregular and uncontrolled side-to-side movement of the eyes — results from the consumption of only a small amount of alcohol.

"A driver with a few drinks may be all right as long as the road is straight and clear, but when something happens suddenly or he has to focus quickly on a moving object, then this condition becomes an important factor."

Mrs. Charlebois, a scientist at the attorney general's laboratory in Toronto, Canada, adds that there also is a five to 10 per cent decrease in hearing efficiency as a result of alcohol.

Mrs. Charlebois also believes that accepted physical tests given by police to drinking drivers tend to overlook conditions produced by only a couple of drinks.

"A driver may be able to walk or touch his nose but that does not mean his reaction is good to something unexpected. This is one thing that is important in driving."

TV TENSION

Is your child tired, nervous. Does he or she complain of vague stomach pains and have no appetite. If so, they may be suffering from TV tension, according to two Air Force physicians.

A study of 30 children with "tired child syndrome" disclosed that all the children were avid television viewers, watching TV from three to six hours per day and six to 10 hours per day on weekends.

"TV watching can make children anxious and tense, causing them to have difficulty sleeping which brings on chronic fatigue," Capt. Richard M. Narkewicz and Capt. Stanley N. Graven told the American Academy of Pediatrics.

NEW APPROACH

This one really happened to a friend.

A neighbor strolled into his yard back in the fall — before it got too cold to cut the grass — and said "you wouldn't happen to be using your lawn mower this afternoon, would you?"

"Yes, afraid so," was the friend's reply.

"Good deal," said the other one with a broad smile, "then you wouldn't mind if I borrow your golf clubs, would you?"

DID YOU KNOW that in all eight traffic deaths in Monroe during 1964, liquor was the chief cause of the accidents in which the fatalities occurred? Incidentally, the eight in 1964 were seven more than in 1963 — a big increase wouldn't you say?

INTERESTING NOTES

MANY PEOPLE who say they rarely dream actually do quite often. The average person has from three to five dreams a night. Customarily, dreams are in black and white. But artists and others who deal in colors have a tendency to dream in color . . .

SPEAKING OF sleep, it has been found that coffee before bedtime won't necessarily keep you awake. The biggest cause of insomnia: the nervous fear you won't be able to go to sleep."

QUOTABLE NOTABLES: "The size of a man can be measured by the size of the thing that makes him angry." — J. K. Morley

CAN YOU name three musical instruments that change shape during a performance? Well, how about the accordian, trombone and bagpipe?

DID YOU KNOW that only 59 per cent of America is privately owned? The federal government administers 34 per cent of the land area, 5 per cent is owned by state and local governments, and about 2 per cent is in Indian reservations. . .

SELFISH

Are we becoming more selfish?

There is a feeling that as a nation of people we are. On an interview the other day the question asked dealt with what the individual had to be thankful about.

Without exception the first words spoken were related to personal health, wealth and belongings. Then as an after - thought came such things as peace, the well-being of other people of the nation.

It used to be that people would pray for blessings on their fellowman, that they were more than happy for the good that might come to them along life's way, but that has changed. People are thinking less and less about how their actions affect their neighbor. It may be that we have forgotten God and the teaching of Jesus; that material things mean more even though they are fleeting and insecure. Maybe it is no wonder that our children think like they do — about the material things in life.

MYSELF

I have to live with myself, and so,
I want to be fit for myself to know;
I want to be able as days go by
Always to look myself in the eye.
I don't want to stand with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things I've done.
I want to go out with my head erect;
I want to deserve all men's respect.
I can never hide myself from me
I see what others may never see;
I know what others may never know;
I can never fool myself and so
Whatever happens, I want to be Self respecting, and conscience free.

Names Not Too Revealing

They Don't Tell Much

By THOMAS A. REEDY

LONDON (AP) — The bobby said he thought it a little funny to ask why a street is called Cheapside when every foot of it is worth about $5,000.

But he carried on manfully and told the stranger:

"The name Cheapside goes back to a time when this was the Cheapside. We really can't help it, sir."

Well, how about bringing it up to date, now that Cheapside is expensive side?

"Well, sir, that wouldn't do. Most wouldn't find it, you know."

This conversation is available any given day inside what they call the City of London, one square mile which once really was the true London, back in the days of William the Conqueror, circa 1066. American tourists bump into it all the time when they penetrate this tiny heart of London and ponder over the wonderful names that refuse to die.

Try a trek through the square mile which happens to be the financial heart of the whole British way of life. Computers may be doing the job up there in the Bank of England, and all sorts of modern gadgets are doing the job throughout the area, but William the Conqueror remains unconquered.

From Cheapside it is easy to go to Threadneedle Street, where the Bank of England stands, as forbidding, gloomy, safe, sort of dirty, kind of regal, and above all full of money.

In William's time there were seamstresses around. In Threadneedle Street these days, all you can find are people who need buttons sewed on.

Spin a few quick lefts and rights and you're on Bread Street. Try to find a loaf of bread. Get off it and you're on Milk Street. There isn't a quart of it in sight. The two ancient byways gradually drift together and guess what? You're on Pudding Lane.

The dogs start to bark a bit and you look down at your shoes and wonder maybe they're losing their arch supports. At that stage you're in Shoe Lane. Try and find a shoe except those plodding up and down.

Hungry at that point, it's a certainty you'll be in Poultry Lane, where there are no chickens any more; Fish Street Hill, which towers over Billingsgate and the fish market, and then on to Ducksfoot Lane, where the only duck's foot is the one that's badgering that gouty left appendage you're stuck with.

Maybe it's Wednesday but you're walking down Friday Street. This takes you to Love Lane, which seems like a good idea until you find it will get you to Addle Street.

All of this takes very little time. One square mile the map says.

CHEAPSIDE NOW is worth about $5,000 a foot and the Bank of England is known as the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street, where seamstresses once sewed fine seams. But the once meaningful, now old, old names hang on in the City of London, as seen in these photos of current street signs. The City is the square mile which was London back around 1866 and now is the financial heart of Britain. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Censorship Impedes Flow Of News Around World

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Censorship, direct and indirect, continued to impede the flow of news around the world in 1964 but a few bright spots appeared.

Soviet Russia came through a change in government without restricting the writing of foreign correspondents. Spain eased controls. The United States remained free of direct censorship, along with most British Commonwealth nations and most of Latin America.

Censorship takes several forms.

Censorship at the source, an effort to restrict information that might be embarrassing if it becomes public, continues even in U.S. units of government.

Many aspects of this source-censorship still are at work in the Soviet Union. Thus while the Kremlin let correspondents file freely when Nikita Khrushchev was replaced, it kept secret some aspects of the underlying situation and allowed no newsmen to question Khrushchev.

Most countries try to restrict military information to official announcements.

Occasionally a nation imposes a "responsibility censorship," under which a correspondent may be called in for criticism or expulsion if he has filed something that officials dislike.

At the end of every year The Associated Press has its correspondents around the world report on censorship and other conditions affecting the free flow of news across international borders. Here are their findings in detail:

SOVIET BLOC COUNTRIES

Indirect censorship caused the expulsion of three correspondents from the Soviet Union in 1964. One was ousted for his own personal reporting; the others were expelled because of stories they had not written — a false report on the death of Khrushchev, and descriptions of the Soviet scene and Lenin's private life.

Foreign correspondents in Moscow are in three categories. Those from friendly Communist countries have some freedom to talk to whomever they wish. Those from Communist newspapers in Western countries are given secret briefings so they can act as channels of information, much of it unpublished to foreign Communists. Others, including Western correspondents, are usually denied access to informed Soviet sources. They are forbidden to make contact with any Soviet official for news other than through the Foreign Ministry or a "state committee for cultural relations with foreign countries." Attempts to go directly to sources bring reprimands from the press department.

Visiting correspondents get better treatment. Their requests for interviews may be honored, while those of resident correspondents are ignored. A tight policy is maintained on requests for resident correspondents' visas. A housing shortage is given as the main reason.

Correspondents need advance permission in writing to go more than 25 miles from Moscow. Many parts of the Soviet Union remain closed to them.

Poland exercises no direct censorship on outgoing dispatches, but has numerous forms of restraint on obtaining news. Western correspondents are treated often as agents of their governments and barred from news conferences and court trials open to local newsmen. Accredited correspondents are informed by the Foreign Ministry when their dispatches are displeasing and reminded of possible consequences. Newsmen based in West Germany find it difficult to obtain visas to cover stories in Poland.

Officially there is no censorship in East Germany but news is controled in favor of the Communist regime by the placing of trusted Communists in control of news sources and media. Western newsmen can obtain visas for visiting East Germany. There is no prior censorship of their copy, but if the authorities find what they regard as an overly critical attitude the correspondent would be asked to leave or would have difficulty obtaining another visa.

NON-COMMUNIST EUROPE AND BRITAIN

Censorship at the source is the most frustrating aspect of news coverage in France. Correspondents were forbidden to write any speculative stories on French atomic experiments in the Sahara. The official reason was that the stories would violate security. The real reason was that France did not want to stir up reactions in African states bordering Algeria. There has been no prohibition on writing about forthcoming H-bomb tests in Mururoa Atol in 1967.

Sometimes censorship at the source is the result of lack of knowledge, for President Charles de Gaulle's confidants are few. But over-all the French tradition of a free press continues with no restrictions on a newsman who wants to speculate. Nor is there any attempt to make life difficult for foreign newsmen who criticize De Gaulle and his policies.

West Germany exercises no censorship except for a ban on Communist publications. Government officials agree the public has a right to be informed, but they reserve the right to withhold information on sensitive and touchy issues.

--In Several Forms--

A notable easing of censorship at the source ccurred in Spain, where there is no control over outgoing dispatches. But the government withdrew the credentials of one Austrian correspondent on the grounds he specialized in news unfavorable to Spain and its regime. The government continued to maintain firm control over domestic newspapers and broadcast news. Directors of publications were permitted to act as their own censors. The requirement for submission of page proofs to an official censor was stopped.

In Portugal foreign correspondents were not subject to direct censorship but publication of articles unfavorable to the government usually touched off a complaint from a government spokesman. There was no easing of direct censorship of domestic newspapers and other news organs.

Flow of news in and out of Britain is entirely free from censorship and restraint at the source is rare. Prime Minister Harold Wilson got some complaints from his Labor party colleagues that he was letting newsmen in on official moves before giving the word to Parliament.

At the Vatican there was significant relaxation at the source of some Vatican news. Official briefings at the Ecumenical Council were detailed with spokesmen reporting in full on disputes that might have been glossed over in the past. During Pope Paul's trip to India an American priest gave regular briefings. The Pope himself broke a barrier between the papacy and the press by chatting with newsmen aboard his airliner on the Rome-Bombay round trip.

There is no direct censorship of outgoing dispatches in European countries.

Ghana maintained its direct censorship over outgoing news. Radiophotos were added to the items needing a censor's stamp. Sports writers covering the world featherweight title bout had to submit their copy to a censor at ringside. Foreign correspondents register at the Ministry of Information. Local newsmen who write for overseas publications say their mail is opened regularly. Foreign correspondents sometimes bring dispatches out of Ghana to avoid censorship.

In Nigeria, the most populous country of Africa, there was no direct or indirect censorship. But during a two-weeks general strike in June foreign correspondents discovered their copy was being scrutinized closely and in at least one instance the cable office refused to transmit part of a dispatch.

In Guinea, correspondents say their mail is opened and dispatches regarded as uncomplimentary result in criticism from government officials.

Occasional difficulties arise in times of stress in the Congo. Stanleyville was barred to foreign newsmen immediately after the November U.S.-Belgian rescue mission. Three British reporters were placed under house arrest when they arrived and were returned to Leopoldville. This followed a story that said Joseph Mobutu, the army chief, made only a brief visit to Stanleyville airport after its capture, and implied he did not risk entering the sniper-infested city.

Such French-speaking states as Congo Brazzaville, Dahomey, Cameroon, Gabon, the Ivory Coast and Togo claim to be free of censorship. But controls are imposed on communications in times of national upheaval. This may amount to censorship.

Severe restrictions at the source impede the work of the few Western correspondents admitted to Communist China. No Americans are among them. There is no direct censorship over dispatches filed out of Peking, but the correspondents are threatened with expulsion if they send dispatches displeasing to the government. The Chinese press and radio are the voice of Peking and under complete control.

ASIA

Censorship is not applied to outgoing dispatches or newspapers on the Chinese Nationalist island of Formosa, but newspapers observe certain recognized taboos, such as avoiding criticism of what is called the supreme goal of national policy — recovery of the mainland. Nationalist China remains barred from the International Press Institute for alleged lack of freedom of the press.

In South Viet Nam censorship of outgoing dispatches is occasionally imposed, or dispatches are delayed. Censorship at the source remained a problem in 1964, but even this slackened. Newspapers were subject to suspension but criticism of the government was permitted.

Stories by foreign correspondents remained untouched in Thailand and the new government permitted newspapers for the first time in five years to express opinions. They were under orders to avoid printing anything prejudicial to public peace and order.

Burma maintained its ban on stationing of Western newsmen in the country. Local newspapers were fed from a single, government-controlled source. Stories filed by foreign correspondents visiting Burma were scrutinized carefully but not censored.

Indonesia's Foreign Ministry press section maintained a close watch on stories about the country printed abroad, but there was no direct censorship. Unfavorable accounts resulted sometimes in action against the correspondent, ranging from a warning to expulsion.

Cambodia maintained a cool attitude toward Western — chiefly American —correspondents, refusing to issue them visas except on occasions suitable to the regime of Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Despite the tension set off by Indonesian guerrilla raids and a nationwide emergency status, Malaysia did not impose censorship on either foreign or local newsmen.

There was no overt censorship in the Indian subcontinent. In most of India, Pakistan and Ceylon, news moved freely and officials were available to persistent newsmen.

Indian officials complained with increasing frequency that the nation's image was presented unfairly abroad. On occasion the government summoned individual foreign correspondents to hear the complaints.

Restrictions on news gathering in Japan stem from the Japanese reporters' clubs in government ministries and agencies which attempt to exclude nonmembers from news conferences and briefings. But Japanese officials are generally willing to be interviewed by foreign correspondents, and there is no censorship of their copy. The domestic press is entirely free.

Relations of the South Korean government with the local press remained cool at year's end. During eight weeks of martial law major newspapers in Seoul and the flow of news to provincial dailies were under strict prior censorship. Dispatches by foreign correspondents remained uncensored.

MIDDLE EAST

Censorship still plagues foreign correspondents in many regions of the Middle East, varying from light to heavy. Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Jordan and Lebanon are among the countries where restrictions of some kind are occasionally applied. But the main chore of the correspondent is in dealing with secrecy that surrounds governments.

Outgoing dispatches are not censored in the United Arab Republic, but contacts with government officials remain limited.

In Israel, correspondents submit dispatches for deletion of anything the censor might interpret as affecting military security.

The censorship picture improved considerably in 1964 in Turkey with the lifting of martial law. Some editions of foreign publications were not distributed during the year because of what were considered anti-Turkish reports of the Cyprus crisis. Foreign correspondents send cables without censorship. It is still difficult to obtain some information from government officials, but appointment of a former newspaperman as minister of press and tourism has improved the problem of censorship at the source.

A touch of censorship was applied during the year in Brazil, which has a long tradition of no censorship. During the March 30-April 1 revolt outgoing dispatches were read by military officials. There was little delay in transmission and apparently nothing was deleted.

LEARNING WHAT John F. Kennedy "really was like" is the task architect I. M. Pei has set for himself. Then he will translate his knowledge into building materials, as the architect selected to design the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library in Boston. Chinese-born Pei and the late President were born a month apart in 1917. Pei studied architecture at Harvard, Kennedy's alma mater. Pei is seen in his penthouse office on New York's Madison Avenue. --A Man-Size Task Set--

By HENRIETTA LEITH

NEW YORK (AP) — In a penthouse office on Madison Avenue, Ieoh Ming Pei is beginning to realize the size of the task he has set for himself — to find out what John Fitzgerald Kennedy was really like.

Pei is not an historian. Neither is he going to write a best-selling book about the "real Kennedy" or produce a documentary film or a television show.

He is an architect, born in Canton, China, who is going to design the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library in Boston. To Pei this means putting the essence of the late president's character and personality into stone or concrete.

"I must learn a great deal more about President Kennedy — now I have only the layman's knowledge of him," Pei said. "I must read about him, educate myself. I must talk to people who knew him and worked with him. So far everyone has told me that President Kennedy was a very complex person.

"I have my own idea about him now — I can't resist thinking about it, dreaming about it. I can't help but relate that to forms, because that's my language."

Pei, the Chinese-born architect, will have less trouble understanding Kennedy, the Boston Irish politician, than one might suppose. For one thing, they were born only a month apart, Pei in April and Kennedy in May 1917.

While Kennedy was an under graduate at Harvard, just a mile or so along the Charles River, Pei was studying at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Later Pei moved over to Harvard to take his master's degree in architecture and serve on the Harvard faculty for three years. Plane-hopping to Boston frequently now to study sites for the Kennedy memorial, he is returning to familiar ground.

Like Kennedy, Pei was one of the young men who came along fast after World War II.

"I was lucky," he says, "to come into practice just during a period of growth and prosperity."

He also was lucky that his work was noticed by builder William Zeckendorf, who brought him into Webb & Knapp, the Zeckendorf firm, as architectural director.

PLANNED MANY

While there he planned Denver's Mile-High Center and Courthouse Square development, Long Island's Roosevelt Field shopping center and housing in New York and many other cities.

In 1955 Pei set up his own firm, I.M. Pei and Associates, and continued to attract attention, including top awards from the National Institute of Arts and Letters and the American Institute of Architects.

He designed MIT's Center for the Earth Sciences, the Newhouse Communications Center at Syracuse University, the Government Center in Boston, the Everson Museum of Art in Syracuse, the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo.

In 1960 his design won the Port of New York Authority competition for a multi-airline terminal at Idlewild Airport — since renamed the John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Meanwhile Pei and his wife— she is the former Eileen Loo and they both became naturalized citizens in 1954 — were busy raising a family, acquiring a New York City home on Beekman Place and a weekend place in Westchester County.

Two sons are now at Harvard, a third at Middlesex School. The architect's favorite way of spending his rare moments of relaxation is playing with "my second family," a four year old daughter.

There's A Church Home For You in the Twin Cities...

Anyone desiring to know the location of a church of any denomination in the Twin Cities and the time of its Sunday services may call The Morning World at 323-2070, FA 3-3660, FA 3-0501 and ask for the church service directory. We'll be glad to supply you the information.

IN TWIN CITIES

Year Of Progress Cited By Ministerial Groups

The past year was a busy one in church circles in the Twin Cities area.

It was marked by an increasing spirit of cooperation among members of various denominations in promoting special observances and seeking a better understanding of others.

One of the biggest controversies arising in church ranks centered around the National Council of Churches and its views and actions concerning integration. Some church groups withdrew from membership in the council, others petitioned for such a move. However, some churches were never affiliated with the council.

NEW FACILITIES

The building of new church facilities and remodeling existing plants continued at a brisk pace, which brought the comment from the Rev. T. E. Miller, president of the West Monroe Ministerial Alliance and pastor of Cypress Street Church of God, that "There is a trend in building bigger and better churches. They are getting more and better facilities than they used to have."

The West Monroe Ministerial Alliance is made up of ministers from various protestant churches in that area.

As the new year started, the Monroe Ministerial Alliance's new president, the Rev. Fred Doolittle, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, announced that "This is the first year that a Catholic priest has belonged to the alliance. We now have representatives from all major denominations, Protestants, Catholics and Jews."

He said that the actions of the Ecumenical Council liberalizing regulations so priests could take part in activities with representatives of other faiths, had made the membership expansion of the alliance possible.

"We're looking forward to working with the Catholics," said Rev. Doolittle.

CHANGE IN SERVICES

Another significant thing noted here as a result of actions of the Ecumenical Council was the change in Catholic Church services, with part of them being conducted in English in addition to the traditional Latin.

Both Alliances have sponsored union Thanksgiving services every year. One union Thanksgiving service is held in West Monroe and three joint services are held at various churches in Monroe under the sponsorship.

Last year the two alliances joined in staging a weekly TV series on "Light From The Book Of Life." And they will join again this year, starting today, in a continuation of that series from 1 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. every Sunday following the subtitle, "The Commandments And You." Rabbi Sylvin Wolf of Temple B'Nai Israel, Monroe, and the Rev. J. P. McKeithen of McGuire Methodist Church, West Monroe, will serve on the discussion panel of the first program. The Rev. John Stewart, pastor of First Christian Church of Monroe, and Rev. Doolittle are serving as co - chairmen in working out details of the program scheduling.

The Monroe and West Monroe Alliances took part this past year in a two - day Institute on Religion and Healing held at St. Francis Hospital's Enaut Hall, for ministers, medical doctors and psychiatrists. Featured speaker was Dr. Myron Madden, chaplain of Southern Baptist Hospital in New Orleans.

Rev. Doolittle said, "It helped to bring about a better understanding between doctors and preachers. It helped us to know how to deal with sick people better, and how not to create problems, but to solve them."

Plans are being considered for conducting another such institute, said Rev. Doolittle.

During the past year the West Monroe Ministeral group visited various service organizations like the Monroe Area Guidance Center and the Boys Club, and had representatives of others speak at their meetings to promote a better understanding of the organizations.

ANOTHER PLAN

Another plan started by the West Monroe group was to have pastors from the various churches present a brief history of their respective churches, along with something on their doctrines and organizational setup.

"We have had some very profitable meetings," said Rev. Miller. "I think we all have thoroughly enjoyed these meetings."

Rev. Miller observed that "In the last decade our churches have had a great many more summer camps for groups of young people. And I know a great many of the other churches have the same type of thing for their young people, too."

The Monroe Alliance during the past year worked on a program with the Chamber of Commerce to encourage holding back on observance of the Christmas season prior to Thanksgiving "to keep the spirit of Christmas in season and make it less commercial."

HOSPITAL PROJECT

The Monroe group this year will devote a lot of its efforts on a project at E. A. Conway Hospital here, said Rev. Doolittle. "We will try to work out a system of interdenominational chapel services in the outpatient waiting room near the hospital, probably on Saturdays or Sundays. We will try to divide it out so different denominations can hold the services. And we will make a special appeal to the governor to see if we can get a space set aside for a chapel, because we feel there is need for a chapel service there."

Rev. Doolittle said the alliance also will get young people to help in the Junior Red Cross Nursing program at the hospital. Another goal is to obtain religious tracts for the patients. "Not just denominational in trend, because they need a spiritual lift then if they ever need one."

In addition to Rev. Miller, other officers of the West Monroe Alliance are the Rev. John Tucker, pastor of Good Hope Baptist Church, vice president, and the Rev. J. P. McKeithen, pastor of McGuire Methodist Church, secretary-treasurer.

Other officers of the Monroe Alliance are the Rev. R. T. Watson, pastor of St. John's Christian Church, vice president, and Rabbi Sylvin Wolf of Temple B'Nai Israel, secretary-treasurer. They recently took office succeeding the Rev. W. Bradley Trimble, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, vice - president and acting president, and Capt. Ronald Greene, commanding officer of the Salvation Army, secretary - treasurer. The Rev. Charles Vorkoper, as pastor of Messiah Lutheran Church, started the year 1964 as president of the alliance, but transferred out of town, leaving the post to be filled by the vice president.

J. L. Pollard Speaker At Church Meet

The Secretary of the Sunday School Department of the Louisiana Baptist Convention, J. L. Pollard, will speak to pastors and other Sunday School leaders of the Southern Baptist Churches of Ouachita Parish in a meeting 10 a.m. Monday at College Place Baptist Church, 301 Sherrouse Ave.

The state Sunday School leader will explain to the local church leaders plans for a director-led Sunday School enlargement campaign scheduled for the Twin Cities and outlying areas February 18 - March 4, 1966.

This will be a major effort on the part of the Baptist churches of this area to greatly enlarge their Bible teaching ministry, officials said.

The Southern Baptist Convention has set a goal to have 10 million enrolled in Sunday School by 1970. The enlargement campaign for the churches of this area next year is one of the projects planned to help attain the convention goal of 2,400,000 within five years.

Film In Making On Late Pontiff

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The lives of two great leaders — Pope John XXIII and Mahatma Gandhi — are coming to the screen, with some surprises. Tough-guy Rod Steiger has the lead in a flim on the late pontiff, while Richard Attenborough, famed British actor, has turned to directing for a movie on the Indian wise man.)

By FRANCESCO MENNELLA

SOTTO IL MONTE, Italy (AP)—Here, on the small north Italian mountain where Pope John XXIII was born, an Italian movie director working with Hollywood tough-guy Rod Steiger is trying to capture on film the essence of the late Pope who stirred the heart of the world with his kindness.

For Rod Steiger the role in a movie about Pope John is a radical departure from most of the parts he has played.

The format of the color film, directed by Ermanno Olmi, is a radical departure, too. It is a semidocumentary with few professional actors. No attempt is being made to make Steiger resemble Pope John. Olmi thought this would have been poor taste.

Instead, Steiger will act as a commentator, speaking directly to the audience from the screen as he traces the life and work of Pope John. From time to time he will step into the action of the picture to represent John in different stages of his life, wearing a cassock but without any further attempt at physical resembiance.

The title of the film is "E Venne Un Uomo" — "There came a man," from the New Testament Gospel of St. John, which says "There came a man, one sent from God, whose name was John." (John 1:6). Shots will be made on location here and in Venice, Istanbul, Sofia, Paris — places where Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli served as Vatican diplomat or pastor before becoming Pope John — and in Rome itself.

Steiger has starred in other Italian movies. But like most foreign actors working in the Italian cinema he will speak in his own language in the Pope John film, and the Italian voice will be dubbed in.

"I accepted this role with great enthusiasm," Steiger said. "I feet I can faithfully interpret his character."

Up to now Olmi's successes have been mostly film dealing with youth..

"When I was asked to make this movie my first impulse was to refuse," he said.

"It sounded terribly irreverent to me. But after reading Pope John's own 'Diary of a Soul' and others of his works, my hesitations vanished. I even became convinced that this movie had to be done sooner or later."

New Facilities Dedication Set At Area Church

JONESBORO (Special) — The educational building and chapel being dedicated by the Jonesboro First Baptist Church today contain more than 12,000 square feet of floor space and house 13 Sunday school departments. The architecture conforms to the colonial style of other bulidings.

An outstanding feature of the construction is the arrangement around a recreation courtyard. Lighted for night activities, the court will be the scene of many events for people of all ages. Inclement weather will not be as valid a reason for missing church and Sunday School now because all buildings will be joined by covered walkways. Also passengers may be unloaded under a shelter when the weather is bad. The adjoining Fellowship Hall and kitchen also have adequate facilities.

St. John's Christian Church, Forsythe at Westminster, Monroe

ST. JOHN'S CHRISTIAN

Ample Space Provided For Growth Of Church

St. John's Christian Church, located on Forsythe Avenue at Westminster, was formed from a nucleus of 62 members of the First Christian Church, commissioned by that congregation on June 3, 1956, while the Rev. R. T. Watson was minister there.

The first service was held on June 10 in the Lexington Avenue Elementary School. The congregation met in the school building until April, 1958. The first unit of the building was dedicated on April 27. It consists of a temporary sanctuary, classrooms, a fellowship hall, a kitchen, an office and a minister's study.

The congregation owns three acres, providing ample parking space and opportunity for future growth. The parsonage is located at 2318 Racine Drive.

FIRST MINISTER

The first minister to serve this church, the Rev. C. R. Burcham, came in March of 1957, and led the congregation until July 25, 1960. The Rev. Leroy Munyon served ad interim until May 1, 1961, when the present minister, Rev. Watson, arrived on the field.

"The church is completely autonomous in government, and is organized to conduct a full program of activities," said Rev. Watson. "Christ is the only head of the church, the Bible is its only discipline. The only ordinances are baptism and the Lord's Supper. The unity of the whole Church of Christ on earth and the personal, responsible freedom of every believer are cardinal items of belief."

SUPPORTS CAUSES

The local church supports causes represented in the Louisiana Association of Christian Churches and the International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ). The communion was established in the United States in the early 1800's and now has some two million members, with churches in many countries of the world wide program of missions, education and benevolence.

Among the communion's institutions in this area are Texas Christian University and Brite Bible College at Fort Worth, Texas, and the Juliette Fowler Homes, for orphans and aged, at Dallas, Texas.

"The Christian Church does not claim any exclusiveness, but rather seeks to labor cooperatively with every Christian cause in the community and throughout the world," said Rev. Watson.

Rev. Watson is vice president of the Monroe Ministerial Alliance, and member of the state board of the Christian Church, the New Church and Outreach Department.

A native of Boone Country, Kentucky, he attended Transylvania College, and the College of the Bible, both in Lexington, Ky. After student pastorates in Kentucky he served with the church in Bryan, Ohio until 1938, when he came to the pastorate of the First Christian Church of Monroe. He remained in that post until 1958 when he went to the Broadmoor Christian Church in Shreveport for three years of service. He returned to Monroe in 1961 to become pastor of St. John's Christian Church.

He is married, has one daughter residing in Shreveport, and three grandchildren.

Last year he was president of the Louisiana State Convention of the Christian Church.

Highlights of the meeting will be the election of five new vestrymen, reports from the rector and curate and heads of organizations, and a talk by the Rev. William F. Draper, missionary in Japan.

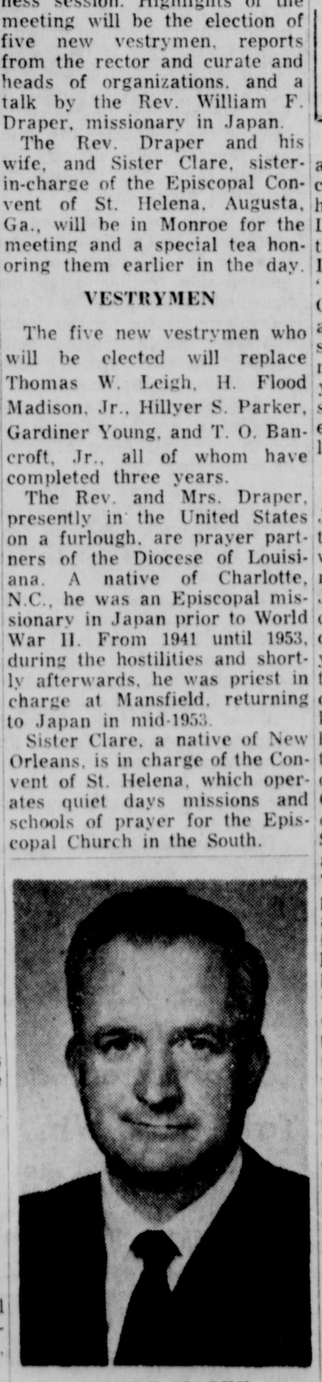

The Rev. Draper and his wife, and Sister Clare, sister-in-charge of the Episcopal Convent of St. Helena, Augusta, Ga., will be in Monroe for the meeting and a special tea honoring them earlier in the day.

VESTRYMEN

The five new vestrymen who will be elected will replace Thomas W. Leigh, H. Flood Madison, Jr., Hillyer S. Parker, Gardiner Young, and T. O. Bancroft, Jr., all of whom have completed three years.

The Rev. and Mrs. Draper, presently in the United States on a furlough, are prayer partners of the Diocese of Louisiana. From 1941 until 1953, during the hostilities and shortly afterwards, he was priest in charge at Mansfield, returning to Japan in mid-1953.

Sister Clare, a native of New Orleans, is in charge of the Convent of St. Helena, which operates quiet days missions and schools of prayer for the Episcopal Church in the South.

The Pastor's Corner

GREAT COMMANDMENT

". . . Love one another as I have loved you."

Rev. Watson, Minister St. John's Christian Church, Monroe

A lawyer once tested Jesus by asking Him, "What is the great commandment?" Jesus said to him, "What is written in the Law? How do you read?" And the man replied, citing both Deuteronomy and Leviticus, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your strength, and with all your mind; and your neighbor as yourself." Whereupon Jesus said to him, "You have answered right; do this, and you will live."

SUMMATION

Throughout His ministry Jesus put such emphasis on this that to the Christian, the whole moral law may be summed up in the term "love." Jesus said once, "This is my commandment that you love one another as I have loved you." Paul wrote that "Love is the fulfilling of law." What kind of love is this? There are many kinds of love. Perhaps no term has been so grossly abused as this one. There are three kinds of love mentioned in the Bible. One is "Eros," an attraction one has to the opposite sex. Some, to their sorrow, never advance beyond the level of an "eros" love. What tragedies in personal lives, in marriages, are in evidence of this. Another is "Phileo," a filial love, the love of friend for friend. How it has enriched us. The third is "Agape," the love of man for God and God for men. This is the highest of all loves. Christianity teaches that this is the way God loves us, this is the way Christ loves us, and this is the way we must love our Lord, and so love others. — all others, even our enemies. This is the love which results in self-giving good will toward all men, regardless of their worthiness for their highest good.

FIND DIFFICULT

We find this very difficult. We do not "fall" into this kind of love. Rather, we must deliberately set out to acquire it and develop it. It requires the noblest constructive effort to achieve.

In this process we discover that there are so many of these "others" who are so unlovable. Jesus illustrated this type of love by His immortal story of the "Good Samaritan." The parable arouses in us a sense of pity for the victim of the thieves; a feeling of indignation against the priest and Levite who "passed by on the other side;" but a strong admiration for the Samaritan who proved his neighborliness. The parable does not say the man took the victim home with him and introduced him to his daughter, or that he recommended him to membership in his club. But he did seek his highest good, regardless of the man's worthiness.

One of the most difficult things about the highest love, is that we are all so in love with ourselves. We become so self-centered we are hard put to rise above the level of our own concerns to be very much concerned about strangers, people we have never seen, those in alien situations. We find it hard to love those of differing economic, social and political standings. How tragic that after nearly 20 centuries of Christianity, there is so much hate, and fear, and indifference. The eruptions of emotions into violence, the conflicts between nations, the starving peoples of the earth, all are symptoms of the lack of love in our world.

We say we believe in it, but is it only academic? Are we willing to pay the price of putting it to work in our lives?

Are we sincerely trying to share it, with even those in our own city? We are divided into rival camps of liberals and conservatives, integrationists and segregationists, rich and poor, the elite and the pariahs, into religious sects, which are being divided into still other sects, and so on, ad infinitum.

"We are the select few, Let all the rest be damned;

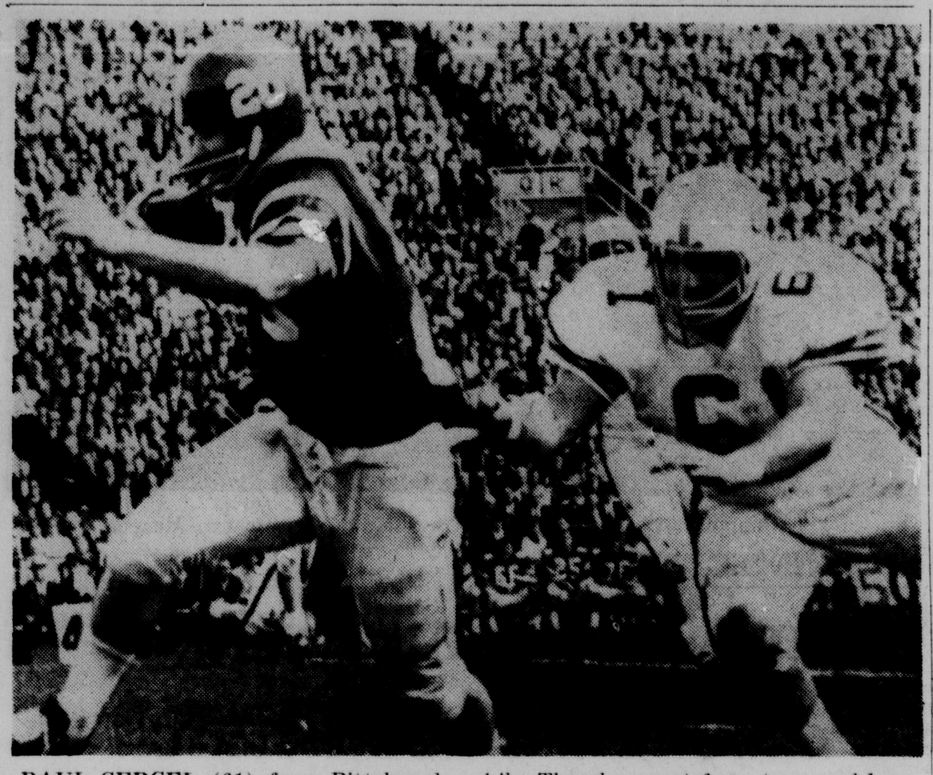

There's room enough in Hell for you, We'll not have Heaven crammed!" (jingle)

Dr. Halford Luccock once told a beautiful story about Heaven's gates being carefully guarded to prevent entrance by any unworthy soul. It was reported one day that the unworthy, the uninvited, the riff-raff were slipping into the celestial city through a hole in the wall in a remote corner. Preparations were made to block their entrance and seal off this hole, when Jesus came by and said, "Let them alone; they are special friends of mine; I have invited them here."

Who is there of us who are worthy of Heaven save by Jesus' invitation? It is by His love we are redeemed and receive eternal life.

"Love, so amazing, so divine, demands my soul, my life, my all."

Neville doubled Ouachita's point production in the opening and closing quarters, and put four players in the double figures in the process Saturday night, to win the Lions' annual invitational cage tournament, 61-42.

The victory upped the Tigers season mark to 16-2 and left Ouachita with a 14-7 record as the Neville squad, under the tutorship of Benny Hollis, successfully defended the crown which it won last year.

West Monroe's girls earned the title in their division with a decisive 64-49 victory over Caldwell.

Linda Smith, selected most valuable player, dropped in 40 points in the Rebel sextet victory with Marilyn Wade, another member of the girls' all tourney team, sinking 18 points. Cecelia Nelson, also all-tournament, got 23 points for Caldwell with Carol Thornhill finishing as Caldwell's other member of the stellar team. West Monroe also landed Martha Rose Rutledge on the team with Leaslie Leath of Ouachita and Mary Rogers of Bastrop rounding out the squad.

J. Dodd Brooks, the lanky Neville scoring ace who hit 18 points to lead the Tigers in the title win, was named most valuable player with Jay Eppinette, who tallied 12 in the championship tilt selected as Neville's other representative to the all tournament team.

Joe Bryant, Ouachita's answer to Brooks, and Wally Rugg, the Lions playmaker, were also named to the squad. Sammy Brewster, who is in the same class with Brooks and Bryant, drew a berth on the Ouachita dream team as did Caldwell's Larry Newton.

Neville, which was never headed in the contest, outshot the Lions 16-8 in the opening quarter and 20-10 in the closing quarter to make the final score look like an easy victory. However, the Lions, aided by the shooting of Rugg, Elmer Smith and Don Corbin, stayed within the 9-11 point range of the Tigers throughout most of the second and third quarters.

The Tigers got a 15 point effort out of playmaker Bill Dunn and 10 points from David Baker. John Clay, who tallied six markers, turned in his usually fine defensive effort in a game which saw only 19 personal fouls and one technical called.

Neville opened the first half with a six point streak while the Lions were having trouble finding the backboard and coasted to a 28-18 lead at intermission. The capacity crowd, on hand for the second night in a row, did not thin out after the halfway mark and stayed throughout the remaining play.

Dunn and Brooks each hit eight points in the opening half to spark the Tigers' point marking efforts while the Bengals' defensive actions proved to be effective in keeping the Lions cold from the field.

LIONS ADVANCE

Ouachita powered its way into the finals by crushing Calhoun, 78-43, in its second straight display of balanced scoring and playing during the tournament.

The entire starting Lion unit hit the double figure column with Don Corbin setting the pace in the run - away victory with 17 points. Wally Rugg and Elmer Smith added 15 each, while Gary Armstrong and Joe Bryant scored 12 points apiece.

Calhoun's Chieftians, who had beaten a fine Kilbourne five, 57-56, in the quarterfinals Thursday, appeared shocked by the opposition that it faced Saturday and could not muster a threat during the contest. Dale Taylor led the Chieftians, who now have a 22-6 record, with 15 points, while the team's star scorer James Futrell came through with 13 markers.

The outside shooting of Rugg and Corbin pushed the Lions into a 24-11 first quarter lead and Ouachita was never pressured. Bryant then teamed with Corbin to hit from in close during the second period to give Ouachita a 42-19 advantage at the half.

The Lions took up the pace in the opening minutes of the second half and reeled off five points before Calhoun could work in to score with Futrell getting a basket three minutes deep into the period. He and Taylor staged a very brief rally during the stanza, but Smith and Armstrong took up the momentary slack in the Ouachita scoring with well-placed shots from the outside as the Lions pulled ahead for a 62-34 lead by the stop.

With reserves playing out much of the fourth period, Ouachita kept up the pace that it set Thursday night in blasting Epps, 80-41, and coasted through the quarter.

Ouachita 24 18 20 16-78
Calhoun 11 8 15 9-43

NEVILLE, 54-53

Neville took a permanent lead with 2:40 remaining to play in a see-saw semifinal battle with Caldwell and picked up three free throws while freezing the ball the remaining minutes for a 54-53 victory over the stubborn Class A Spartans.

The decision stopped Caldwell's winning streak at 15 and left the Spartans with a 15-2 record for the year.

The Tigers led all during the first half, but Caldwell came back to tie the game at 28-28 on the first shot of the third quarter and the duel started at this point. The game was tied four times during the final two frames and the lead changed hands a total of six times with a 15-foot jumper by J. Dodd Brooks giving Neville its final and deciding lead of the afternoon.

Jay Eppinette added a layup with 2:05 left to play for a four-point Neville advantage (51-47), but Larry Newton hit a 10-foot jumper for Caldwell to cut the margin to two points as 1:45 remained to play.

Neville then went into a stall and picked up a free throw with 28 seconds to play when Brooks was fouled to take a three-point lead at 52-49. Newton's tipin with 15 seconds showing on the clock cut the margin to one, at 52-51, but Neville's John Clay got a pair of free throws on an intentional foul with 11 seconds remaining. Caldwell's Blake Harveston then sank a field goal with the buzzer to give the final tally.

Eppinette led Neville's scoring with 14 points, with a trio trailing him in double figures. Brooks connected for 13 and David Baker and Clay hit 10 points each.

Newton was the top gunner for Caldwell with 22 points, followed by Boone McCarty, who hit 15 markers before fouling out midway of the fourth quarter; and Harveston with 12.

Neville led 16-10 at the first stop, but held only a two-point lead of 28-26 by the half. Newton and McCarty then teamed up to push the contest into a nip-and-tuck battle as the teams drew even at the end of the third at 40-40.

Favored South Tied By North

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Joe Namath put on another outstanding passing performance Saturday but it wasn't enough as the South and the North battled to a 7-7 tie in the annual Senior Bowl football game.

Namath, Alabama's star quarterback who signed a professional football contract last week for an estimated $400,000 to become the richest rookie in gridiron history, passed the South team all over the field but couldn't get any help from his receivers on the big plays.

For the game, Namath, now the property of the New York Jets of the American Football League, completed 22 of 38 attempts for 246 yards and his team's only touchdown.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Statistics of the Senior Bowl football game:

	North	South
First downs	10	26
Rushing yardage	39	149
Passing yardage	111	266
Passes	7-18	25-44
Passes intercepted by	4	0
Punts	9-43	2-29
Fumbles lost	0	2
Yards penalized	28	5

The North scored in the second period to take a 7-0 lead when Indiana's Rich Badar sneaked the ball over from the one. This was the North's only big offensive drive of the entire ball game.

With 10:28 left in the third period, Namath hit Bob Hayes, the Olympic gold medal winner and the world's fastest human, on a 53-yard touchdown pass.

Namath was the game's big drawing card and his presence helped attract a sellout crowd of 40,605 — the first in the history of the game — and he gave the fans their money's worth. He was mobbed by thousands of fans on the field after the game and several police officers had to bull their way through the crowd to rescue him.

The South controlled the game offensively in the first half but went to the dressing room at intermission trailing after Bob Schweickert dropped two sure touchdown passes for the South.

Another South scoring drive died on the nine-yard line after John Hilton of Richmond took a 17-yard pass from Namath and fumbled it on the 10 with the North's Floyd Hudlow of Arizona recovering.

Schweickert was not alone in his inability to hang onto the football, but his failure to hold on to those two sure touchdown passes really hurt the South.

The first one he dropped was thrown by Steve Tensi of Florida State. Tensi fired the ball 16 yards and laid it right into Schweickert's arms on the goal line but he couldn't hold onto it.

A few minutes later, Namath dropped a 40-yarder right in his arms again when he was all alone and just two steps from the goal line, but this one was dropped too.

JOINS JETS, JOE

Huarte Given Big Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — John Huarte, Notre Dame's star quarterback and the 1964 Heisman Trophy winner, signed to play for the New York Jets of the American Football League Saturday, and said he was ready to get into the high-priced quarterback derby the team will run next season.

The Jets wouldn't say how much it cost to land Huarte but guesses around town are putting the figure at $200,000, or just half of what the Jets reportedly shelled out for Joe Namath, the gimpy-kneed quarterback from Alabama.

Actually, both figures contain a lot of fringe benefits such as insurance policies and annuities, which can be listed at cash or face value, sources said.

"We're never said how much Namath got," said one Jet official, "and we aren't saying how much we paid for Huarte."

Sonny Werblin, the show business tycoon who owns the Jets, said the figure on the Huarte contract was "privileged information." He said the length of the contract was, too.

That led to speculation that the pact took all possible advantage of long-term tax write-offs.

Huarte said money wasn't everything in his choice of the Jets over the Philadelphia Eaggles, who are coached by Joe Kiharich, the man who imported the Californian to Notre Dame in the first place.

"You have to weigh all the factors, and then make a decision," Huarte said. "Such as where you want to live, and that sort of thing.

"I had never been to Philadelphia, but I had been to New York and I think it is a wonderful city. Also, I plan to go on to graduate school, and there are two of the best in the country in New York.

"Then, the Jets are a young team and they have a solid organization. The money offers were comparable."

Huarte, who led Notre Dame off the football floor last season to a 9-1 record and the No. 3 national ranking, was the No. 2 draft pick of the Jets. The Eagles picked him No. 6.

Namath was the No. 1 selection of the Jets, who also signed Bob Schweickert of Virginia Tech, another quarterback, and finished up last season with three quarterbacks on the team.

Marion Raises Mark To 25-0 At Sterlington

STERLINGTON (Special) — Marion's boys continued their all-conqueroring antics here Saturday night, beating Linville, 78-52, for the championship of the Sterlington Invitational basketball tournament.

Bonita's girls whipped Marion, 45-42, and Sterlington got by Linville, 50-47.

Marion dominated the boys all-tournament team, placing Reagan, Bennett Taylor and Gray Taylor on the mythical club with Lanny Parker of Linville and David Stuart of Sterlington. Gary Crow, play making guard for Marion, was chosen the most valuable player.

For the girls, Karen Benford of Marion, Jackie McKoin of Bonita and Janet Pilgreen of Linville joined three Sterlington stars — Janice Nale, Jackie Dumas and Charlotte Swayze. Bonita's Betty Kilcrease was the most valuable player.

Robertson Takes Charge To Lead Royals' Triumph

BALTIMORE (AP) — Oscar Robertson took charge in the final period, scoring 16 of his 42 points, to pace the Cincinnati Royals to a 128-119 National Basketball Association victory over the Baltimore Bullets Saturday night.

Robertson sank 16 of 31 shots from the floor and 10 of 11 from the foul line. He capped his outstanding performance with 21 rebounds and 10 assists.

Baltimore opened up a 12-point lead in the first quarter as Kepin Loughery scored eight of his team-leading 25 points and also contributed five assists.

Grambling Falls At Baton Rouge

GRAMBLING (Special) — Southern University took advantage of Grambling's mistakes to post a 105 - 89 victory over the nation's second ranked small college team here Saturday night.

Southern broke from a 47 - 47 halftime deadlock and went on a scoring spree six minutes deep into the second half, using the Tigers' own errors to pull away.

Pacing Southern were Robert Love with 34, Ronald Hayes with 18 and Aaron Regan with 35.

AFL All-Star To End Long Grid Season

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The final game of the long, long football season — which began way back last summer — will be played here next Saturday when the American Football League's All-Star squads collide in Tulane University's 82,500-seat stadium.

Meetings of the AFL owners and the league's player committee will precede the All-Star match.

This marks the first time the All-Star game has been played in a non-league city.

David Dixon, head of a group trying to woo pro football to New Orleans, invited the AFL to play its season-ending game here and the league accepted.

Proceeds of the game will go to a fund to help improve the city's police force.

Lou Saban, who coached his Buffalo Bills to the Eastern and league titles, will guide the East team. Sid Gillman of the Western champion San Diego Chargers will make his third appearance as head coach of the West All-Stars.

Gillman will be able to call on three men who have led the AFL in rushing — Billy Cannon, Abner Haynes and Clem Daniels.

Cannon, the former Louisiana State All-America and Heisman Trophy winner now playing for the Oakland Raiders, won the league rushing title in 1961. Haynes was the top ground-gainer the previous year and Daniels, the 1963 leader, holds the AFL record of 1,099 yards for a season.

Except for one appearnace in an exhibition game, Cannon will be playing before the folks in his home state for the first time in five years — since his days at LSU.

Saban will not be without a rushing champion, either. As he did during the regular season, Saban will count heavily on two-time ball-carrying champ Cookie Gilchrist, who won the crown in 1962 and also this year.

ONE POINT MARGIN

Centenary Frosh Defeat Northeast

Centenary's hustling freshmen overcame a five point halftime deficit early in the second half, then held on to whip Northeast State's frosh, 69 - 68, at Brown Gym Saturday night.

The Indians led at intermission, 40 - 35, and quickly upped it to 42 - 35 on a short jumper by Walter Hays, but Centenary began whittling away at the margin and went ahead of Northeast for the first time, 46 - 45, with 14:38 to play.

Mike Gibbs and Dale McGibany, Centenary's top scorers with 18 points each, sparked the visitors' come - from - behind rally with two buckets each.

Northeast got the lead back shortly afterwards on two free shots by Charlie Gammill and for the next five minutes the lead swayed back and forth.

The score was tied at 9:09 on a shot by Hays, leaving the count 53 - 53. However Gibbs scored on a tip with eight minutes remaining and Centenary spurted to a seven point lead. McGibany scored twice on fast breaks and Jay Brodt added a free toss before Northeast got back on the scoreboard with a set from the corner by Rich Bailey.

Bailey then cut Centenary's margin to four points, 60 - 56, with a free shot which was followed by two - pointers from Ronnie Suggs and Johnny Peel that tied the game, 60 - 60, with a little over three minutes to play.

Gibbs got another tipin with two minutes to play and after Northeast missed its next scoring attempt the Gentlets went into a freeze. It paid off handsomely as they scored three straight points on free shots for a 65 - 60 lead with 45 seconds to play.

Bailey hit wth 38 seconds left and the score was 65 - 62, then Chris Rhodes completed a fast break for two more Tribe points with 27 seconds showing. This left the score 65 - 64 but Northeast fouled McGibany and the little guard sank both shots on a one - and - one situation.

McGibany's free tosses put the visitors in front 69 - 66, and Rhodes' desperation basket with two seconds was to no avail.

Hayes led all Northeast scorers with 17 points, Bailey added 15, Gammill got 11 and Peel scored 10.

Andy Fullerton, all - stater from Shreveport Fair Park, followed Gibbs and McGibany for Centenary with 15 points.

Duck Season Not For Area

With Sam Hanna

State Season Good

When it comes to duck hunting, Northeast Louisiana was left out again this season.

Although a few spots were good for duck hunting, the area, in general, had a poor season. It was even sub-standard for Northeast Louisiana.

And the reason is the same as it's always been. The season was just too early.

Now that it's over, you watch the ducks boil in. They do it every year.

Richard Yancey, Louisiana's assistant wildlife director, said the season for the state was good. He was speaking mostly for South Louisiana where most of the duck hunting is good.

But Dick said South Louisiana had a good season. He also said he believed the January inventory would show as many ducks in Louisiana as in January of last year and that was in the neighborhood of seven million.

The figure speaks for itself. It also speaks for a January season.

While most of Northeast Louisiana was picking up the crums this season, Arkansas was having a big year, according to the Arkansas Game & Fish Commission.

The commission said this week that the Arkansas season, which ended last Sunday, four days after the Louisiana season ended, was one of the best in several years — certainly the best since 1960.

Arkansas winters around a million mallards — favorite fowl here — and they really go out to make the greenheads feel at home, which is something we're going to have to do in this section.

Dick Yancey says Louisiana will continue its fight to get the federal government to extend the framework until January 15th, which he said would be suitable for the entire state.

This year the framework ended on January 3rd, which is what Arkansas selected but Louisiana didn't. Our season started four days earlier.

Four days may not sound like much, but they can mean an awful lot in Northeast Louisiana when the ducks are coming in. They can mean the difference between some happy hunters and some unhappy hunters.

So if the state is successful someday in extending the framework to January 15th, then we would urge the commission to take the latest season possible for North Louisiana's sake.

Getting the late season may be a possibility, Dick Yancey says, because the new director of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries & Wildlife, John Gottschalk, spent several days this week in Louisiana touring the state's wildlife facilities.

Yancey guided him across the marsh country on a cook's tour of the refuges. We hope John Gottschalk liked what he saw and will look favorably on the state's requests in the future.

Locally, just a few blinds had good shooting in Wham Brake, which gets worse each year. We bet some of the hunters have taken their decoys out of Wham for the last time.

Black Bayou, however, had a better season than Wham, especially on the Second Lake and along the pipeline.

But with so much water on the ground, the duck concentration in this area has been spread out. And that's the story.

We've got to bunch them up to have a good season. By next year perhaps the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area will be better equipped for duck hunting.

But that alone won't do the trick.

Tensas River Project

E. H. Stewart, president of the Fifth District Levee Board, of Tallulah says the board will make its decision Wednesday regarding the proposed Tensas River project.

Stewart advised us on the phone Friday that the board, at its regular meeting at the Tallulah office Wednesday, would decide whether it will ask the U. S. Corps of Engineers to carry out the drainage of the Tensas.

The board has a tough decision to make since the project is supported by the East Carroll Police Jury, but opposed by the Madison Parish Police Jury and the Tensas Parish Police Jury.

If requested to do so by the levee board, the Army engineers will clean out and dredge the Tensas for drainage purposes. They have under consideration the same type project conducted on the Boeuf River, as well as other streams in Northeast Louisiana.

Personally, we would like to see the levee board drop the project, which was first requested about 20 years ago.

We feel that way because we think the government's drainage of our rivers ends in great harm of our natural resources, especially wildlife and timber. Since the project is opposed by the people of two parishes as well as the timber industry and the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission, we don't see how the levee board could do anything but turn the project down.

But it's the board's decision. It'll be interesting to see the outcome.

Deer Season Closing

Today's the last day of the deer season.

When the sun goes down late this afternoon, it'll be all over for another year.

The season closed Tuesday here in Ouachita Parish where the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area, according to biologist Cliff Williams, had its biggest year.

Cliff estimates the kill at between 100 and 110 deer. Last year about 65 deer were killed on Russell Sage.

The area is building a good deer population, although it's far from being over - crowded with whitetails. But there's much work to be done.

For one thing, Russell Sage is in bad need of some access roads into the area. It got so bad in the muddy woods that few hunters were able to get to the depths of the Sage.

Access roads would help a lot.

In addition, there are several privately - owned tracts of land in and around Russell Sage that would be ideal as additions to the area. Unless the state buys these tracts, they'll eventually be leased by private clubs.

We're not knocking private hunting clubs because people certainly have the right to organize them and belong to them. But we're saying that the public interest would be best served if the state could add to Russell Sage.

Especially since the Monroe area is growing, which means there'll be more hunters in the years to come.

Incidentally, four or five bear were killed along the East Carroll - Madison line during the five - day season that opened December 26th. That's more than the entire state kill last year.

Little Man's Corner

It was springtime in January, but some went fishing and some went hunting and the little men made news afield.

Deer hunters should have been standing out in the outdoor news this week as the season closes today, but instead the bass fisherman captured the spotlight.

For instance, bass fishermen were catching some lunkers at Bussey Brake. And believe it or not, but F. A. Cantrell of Monroe caught a 10½ - pound bass at Bussey.

That may be the largest bass that's ever been caught in Bussey.

F. A. Cantrell also caught a 6 - pounder, two 5 - pounders and a 4 - pounder to go along with the 10½ - pounder.

And they're catching them trolling.

Bass fishing also has been good at Black Bayou trolling. Everett Johnson of Monroe caught one that weighed 6 - lb., 4 - oz. while Homer Roark of West Monroe landed the limit.

Youngsters Billy Cohen and Henry Cohen Jr. caught eight bass and Sam Danna, the old pro, got the limit on two different days. Sam LaDart is catching bass at Black Bayou also. And so is Ken Case.

Fishing in the Ferriday area has been good too. Wilburn McFarland of Rayville got the limit of bream in Lake St. John.

Meantime, a lot of local hunters ended the duck season in Arkansas. Wood (Sonny) Sers of West Monroe reports that he and Bill Kelly, also of West Monroe, along with L. V. Armstrong and Bob Ellen of Monroe and Jack Bridges of Jackson, Miss. enjoyed two successful days of duck hunting at Stuggart.

Sonny says they all got the limit and the people in Arkansas are now calling Bill Kelly "Deadeye Bill."

But the deer hunters were making news too.

And Wade Pearson, the West Monroe sport, got two bucks on Davis Island. After making a trip out West where he failed to scratch, Wade found out that Louisiana is the place to go.

From Monroe, John Ensminger has run out of tabs. He hunts around Newellton where he kills deer every year.

Monroe duck hunter Jake Benton and his boys closed out what he called an excellent duck season. They hunted Black Bayou and also a private spot south of town.

Hunters in the Waterproof - Ferriday area have been killing deer too. Maxie Carol Mack, a young lady, of Ferriday dropped a 3 - point buck in Tensas.

Also killing deer in Tensas were Dalton Miller Sr., 5 - pointer, of Waterproof, B. U. Miller, 6 - points, Ferriday, Randy Miller, spike, Ferriday.

And getting their bucks in Concordia from Ferriday were Kenneth Odom, 5 - points, O. C. House, 5 - points, Morris White, 10 - points, Bruce Dykes, 8 - points, and Austin Wilson, 11 pointer.

From West Monroe, Buddy Harrelson didn't start hunting until he was grown, but he's developed into one of the best. Buddy killed three bucks this year.

Penn Officially Signs Bob Odell As Head Coach

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The University of Pennsylvania officially named Bob Odell its new head football coach Saturday, two days after the former All-America halfback disclosed he had accepted the job at his alma mater.

The anticlimactic announcement that the 42-year-old Odell was the successor to John Stiegman, fired on Dec. 6, was made by the university president, Gaylor Harnwell. He received a three-year contract reported in excess of $12,000 a year.

Odell, coach at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa., in the past seven years, already has announced he will attempt to rebuild Penn's football program with "an aggressive recuiting program."

Once a powerhouse in Eastern Football, Penn teams have had losing seasons in 11 of the last 12 years. This past season the Red and Blue won only one game under Stiegman.

Odell said Thursday he took the job with the understanding Penn officials are "anxious to have a good program and will do the things necessary to compete with Harvard, Yale and the other teams in the Ivy League."

"We'll try to do things so that we can compete on an equal basis with the successful teams in the league," he said, cautioning, however, that the recruiting program wasn't going to run wild.

UNITAS IS REASON

West Club Is Picked In Pro Bowl Contest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The West, led by Baltimore quarterback Johnny Unitas, will be favored over the East when the finest talent in the National Football League performs in the 15th annual Pro Bowl game today.

Clear, cool weather was promised and the crowd may exceed the record attendance of 72,250 set in 1959.

The game, closing out the long NFL campaign, will be nationally televised by NBC, starting at 4 p.m., EST.

The West, which leads in the series 9-5, has been the slender favorite from the outset, a matter that puzzles the East in view of two quite recent events — the Cleveland Browns' 27-0 shutout over the Baltimore Colts for the NFL championship, and the St. Louis Cardinal triumph over the Green Bay Packers, 24-17, in the Playoff Bowl in Miami a week ago.

This is a game of pride and prestige. The players are selected by the coaches of the Eastern and Western Divisions of the league, along with Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The members of the winning squad receive $1,000, the losers $800, and all gain a good arguing point in salary negotiations if they are picked for the game.

One of the more notable involves the two fullbacks, Jimmy Taylor of the Packers and Jim Brown of the Browns.

Taylor was a standout in last year's battle and even Unitas, who get the honor, said later he thought the former Louisiana State star merited the Most Valuable Player trophy.

The coaches, Blanton Collier of Cleveland and Don Shula of Baltimore, each has 33 men to play and both promise to utilize each one.

Dan Sikes Shares Lead With Casper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Casper fell back with a one-over par 72 and Dan Sikes came up with a 67 as the two shared the lead with 138 totals at the 36-hole point Saturday of the $70,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

The 33-year-old Casper toured the par 36-35-71 Rancho Municipal Course in 37-35-72 and Sikes did it in 33-34-67.

Arnold Palmer lost ground, following up his first round 72 with a 73 that put him well down the line at 145.

"There was frost on the first green when I started out but I think there was more frost in my swing," said Casper, who led off Friday with a 66.

U. S. Open champion Ken Venturi shot his second straight 72 for 144. Tony Lema stayed in contention with a 71 for 141, and one stroke back with a 72 was PGA champion Bobby Nichols.

Defending champion Paul Harney and young Babe Hiskey also stuck in close. Harney, who was tied in second place with Hiskey the first day, had a 71 for 139. Hiskey shot a 72 for 140 and a tie with Doug Sanders, who carded his second straight 70.

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Kentucky's Wildcats snatched the lead at the opening scramble and held it all the way in drubbing Louisiana State 79-66 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game here Saturday night.

HULA BOWL

Elkins Leader In South's Win

HONOLULU (AP) — The South, with All-America Larry Elkins of Baylor scoring two touchdowns trimmed the North 16-14 in the Hula Bowl Friday night, after one coach and one player had walked out because of the pro football signing dispute.

End John Henderson of Michigan pulled out of the game just before the kickoff. It was announced he was worried about his eligibility for track later this year.

Hula Bowl officials pointed out that many athletes have played college sports after this game in the past, but there was a special situation in this game.

Oklahoma players Jim Grisham and Ralph Neely played, reportedly after pressure from the Dallas Cowboys, who have signed both to National Football League contracts. Grisham and Neely were among the four Oklahoma players booted off the squad before the Gator Bowl game when it was discovered they had signed early pro contracts.

When Grisham and Neely were allowed to play, Len Casanova of Oregon, head of the American Football Coaches Association, pulled out in protest.

The game itself, played in balmy weather, produced some sharp blocking and tackling, and a few surprises.

One was the showing of Bob Berry of Oregon, who outshone both Jerry Rhome of Tulsa, the Back of the Year, and Craig Morton of California, although he was pitching for the losing side.

After the South had scored first on a 26-yard field goal by Larry Zeno of UCLA, Berry took the North in for a touchdown and an 8-3 halftime lead.

Elkins returned a punt 76 yards in the third quarter to put the South on top 9-8. Elkins followed blocks by Mike Haffner of UCLA and Ken Henson of Texas Christian on his long gallop.

IN FRIENDLY FASHION

Corbett Says Premature Signings Can Be Stopped

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Corbett, chairman of the NCAA's professional-relations committee, predicted Saturday that the problem of premature signing of college football players by pro leagues can be solved in a friendly fashion.

Corbett, the Louisiana State University athletic director who is here for the NCAA convention which formally opens Monday, said he conferred at length with Pete Rozelle, the National Football League commissioner, Friday night.

"I think something can be done and we will have the cooperation of the pros," Corbett said. "I think we are on the right road.

"It is this simple. We all live here. The high schools, the colleges and the pros. We have to live here and we have to learn together. That we will do."

Corbett said the meeting with Rozelle, which took place in a Chicago airport lounge while the NFL commissioner was en route to San Francisco, was "in an excellent spirit of cooperation. It was realistic and progressive."

Corbett declined, however, to answer direct questions on just what he and Rozelle discussed, pleading that such announcements would be "premature and presumptious at this time."

Corbett said he would not be able to spell out any questions taken up until he has a chance to meet with his committee, consisting of Len Casanova of Oregon, who walked away from a coaching job in Honolulu's Hula Bowl because premature pro signees were scheduled to play, and Dave Nelson of Delaware.

Corbett said he had not yet talked with Commissioner Joe Foss or any other representative of the American Football League, adding that he hoped to do that Saturday night or Sunday.

"I think we will have something positive in two days," Corbett said. "I feel we will accomplish something at this convention."

The whole problem—one of three major issues expected to arise at the convention—came up when four Oklahoma football players signed pro contracts before playing in the Gator Bowl game Jan. 2. They were declared ineligible for the game.

Neely originally signed with Houston of the AFL, then signed a second pact with Dallas of the NFL. Grisham signed with Minnesota of the NFL.

NCAA regulations prohibit a player from appearing in any NCAA-sanctioned event after he has signed a pro contract.

NCAA executive Director Walter Byers has said publicly he would like to work out an arrangement whereby the pros do not hold their draft until after Jan. 1. Corbett sidestepped questions on whether such a matter was discussed with Rozelle.

The other major items expected to come up are the long-standing, complex struggle between the NCAA and AAU, and a proposed bylaw making it mandatory for a prospective athlete to have a predicted 1.6 grade point average on a 4.0 system to be eligible for grants in aid.

LOUISIANA'S CLASS AA all - state quarterback, Steve Mansur of Baton Rouge Redemptorist, looks over the athletic grant-in-aid-contract he has signed with Northeast State. He is flanked by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Weber Mansur. Standing are his high school mentor, Vince Gonzales, and Northeast Assistant George Luffey.

Northeast Inks Two Additional Grid Standouts

An all-state quarterback from Baton Rouge and a former Neville of Monroe guard star will play their football at Northeast next fall.

Northeast Coach Dixie White announced the signing of the two players this week.

The quarterback is Steve Mansur, who guided Redemptorist of Baton Rouge to a perfect regular season, including decisive victories over both eventual class AA state finalists. The ex-Neville standout is Andy Mapp.

Mansur was named to the all-state first team after completing 30 of 64 passes for 508 yards and four touchdowns, rushing for 461 yards and a 5.5 average and leading his district in scoring with 78 points. He stands 6-0 and weighs 170.

Mapp made the all-district 2-AA second team in 1962. He weighs 205 pounds and is 5-10 tall. Andy's father, Marcus Mapp, is chairman of Northeast's department of geology and was a star lineman at Mississippi State in the 1930's and later an assistant coach at the same institution.

WITH DEMONS

GSC Home Tilt Next Tribe Date

After breaking even in two Gulf States Conference road games, Northeast State prepares for its first league home game Tuesday night against Northwestern.

Northeast dropped a 91-87 decision to Southwestern at Lafayette Friday night after defeating Louisiana Tech in Ruston Tuesday, 79-71. The Indians are now fourth in the league race at 1-1, behind Southeastern (3-0), Southwestern and McNeese (both 2-1). Northwestern is 0-2 and Tech 0-3.

Northwestern's 62-58 loss to McNeese in overtime at Lake Charles Friday night was its fourth straight. The Demons are now 7-6 overall and got off to a fast start before hitting their slump.

Amazing shooting by Southwestern, particularly all-American Dean Church, who scored 39 points, plus foul trouble and poor free throw shooting by Northeast combined to spell defeat for the Indians at Lafayette Friday night.

Southwestern made 58.9 per cent of its field goal attempts Friday and 75.6 of its foul attempts. Northeast matched the Cajuns from the field with 33 goals but was again plagued by poor free throw shooting.

The Indians made only 67.7 per cent of their foul shots Friday and have made only 65.9 for the full season.

Northeast was badly hurt when its top scorer, Tommy Enloe, fouled out of the Southwestern game with more than 10 minutes to play. The 5-9 Saline junior had 23 points at the time and is averaging 20.1 for the full season.

Dick Williams had his best night of the season in the game, scoring 21 points, while Larry Butler also hit his season peak with 19. Glynn Saulters threw in 15. Williams also fouled out Friday.

Sophomore Paul Thompson again led all rebounders by grabbing 12 missed shots. He is averaging 8.9 rebounds a game while Butler has a 7.6 average and Williams a 5.5 average on the boards.

Freshman Saulters trails Enloe in Indian scoring with a 17.6 average, Butler is averaging 12.1, Williams 11.9 and Thompson 8.5.

Northeast has a non - conference game slated next week in addition to the GSC contest against Northwestern. The Indians meet the University of Mexico Saturday night in Brown Gym.

West Monroe Boy's Club

The Royals knocked off the Celtics, 31-18, in a Little Boys League contest Saturday in West Monroe Boys Club action.

Randy Jackson popped in 22 points for the Royals while Johnny Cobb netted 10 for the Celtics.

The Sixth Dixie Exhibition sponsored by the Montgomery, Ala. Museum of Fine Arts will open on Feb. 28. Drawings, prints, gouache and watercolors completed since Jan. 1, 1963 are eligible from artists living in Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. Entry cards and work are due Feb. 13. Write to The Registrar, Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts, 440 S. McDonough St. There is a jury and purchase prizes.

Artists living in Northeast La. and all of Mississippi are eligible fo rthe $1,500 prize money offered in the 10th. Annual Mid-South exhibition to be presented Feb. 26 to March 31 at Brooks Memorial Art Gallery in Memphis, Tenn. "Best in the Show" will receive the $1,000 purchase prize and $100 each will be awarded in the following catagories: popular prize, oil or related medium, watercolor, sculpture and prints and drawings. All Tennessee, Mississippi, and Arkansas artists are eligible as well as artists living in those sections of Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Alabama, and Louisiana who are within a 200 mile radius of Memphis. For further information and entry blanks, write Mrs. Parker Hall, Chairman, Mid-South Exhibition, 4712 Cole Rd., Memphis, 17, Tennessee.

Heretofore the above information would have been of interest only to those practicing artists in the area who enter their works for recognition and awards. Now, suddenly, al lof our residents are involved as the news of The First Regional Exhibition to be held at The Masur Museum of Art is being released via newspaper, radio and television as well as by artistic grapevines throughout Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi.

An exhibition such as this is open to all. All of those who feel their paintings are of merit or at least those who possess that marvelous virtue, self confidence.

There has to be an initial time to enter a competition, so why not make it now? Of course the novice must consider that his work will be judged the same as an artist who has perhaps had an intensive educational art background and has been selling paintings and winning awards for years. But as we have stated in this column before, a work of art can not be explained. It must be experienced. Perhaps the artist taking part in competition for the first time will submit a creation that possesses that brand of magic, born of such sensitive emotions, that it intuitively follows all those components an art work is judged meritous by.

The procedure for entering the competition is quite simple. You must first obtain an entry blank from The Masur Museum of Art. You then submit a color slide, 2x2 inches, with name and address of the artist, title of painting, numbered size of painting, medium (must be oil, acrylic or watercolor), price plainly written in ink on each slide and a dot designating top which must accompany the entry form with a check or money order for the entry fee of $3.00 for first slide and $2.00 for the second slide. The fee is not returnable.

All slides must be recieved by Feb. 10. The slides will then be sent to Atlanta, Ga. where Gugmund Vigtel, curator of the Atlanta Art Association, will serve as juror (judge).

The winning awards will be: a purchase prize of $700.00 (this painting will be retained by the museum) and three other merit awards of $100.00 each.

Paintings should either be marked with a selling prize price or N.F.S. (not for sale). No commission will be charged on sales. The color slides will be returned to the artist immediately upon selection by the jury. The show will be open to the public and many collectors March 14, to April 4, 1965.

Mr. Vigtel will choose 50 to 60 paintings, which will be hung in the exhibit, from the color slides. The selected paintings themselves will then be sent to the museum for exhibition and Mr. Vigtel will come to Monroe to judge the award winners in the various catagories.

The awards are lucrative and just to have a painting chosen for exhibit is a tribute to the artist's talent. For entry blanks write to the Masur Museum of Art, 1400 South Grand, Monroe, La.

AUXILIARY MEMOS

Hostesses this week at the museum during the viewing hours of two to five p.m. will be: Sunday, Jan. 10, Mrs. William Inabnet and Mrs. Aron Parker; Monday, Jan. 11, closed; Tuesday, Jan. 12, Mrs. Ryan Sarto, and Mrs. Hugo Angelini; Wednesday, Jan. 13, Mrs. Hillman Madison and Mrs. Jack Rivers; Thursday, Jan. 14, Mrs. Pierre Lauve and Mrs. Jack Masur; Friday, Jan. 15, Mrs. James Aycock, Mrs. Rabun Smith and Mrs. Earl Graser and Saturday, Jan. 16, Mrs. Chris Ulrich.

The Book Club of Temple B'nai Israel will have as guest speaker Mrs. H. H. Land who will present a program about the famous "Jerusalem Windows" created by Marc Chagall. Mrs. Land will illustrate her talk with color slides and a small replica of the famous windows.

Members of the book club and their guests, meeting in the Temple library, will be only a room away from the magnificent mosiac panels of the Ark in the sanctuary describing the three basic elements of Jewish belief: God, His law and Israel.

The work was done by Gregor Goethals of Monroe whose well known works include mosaics in the Riverside Church in New York City. Mrs. Goethals is on leave from the faculty of Northeast Louisiana State College to attend Harvard University under a Danforth Fellowship. While in town for the holidays, she paid a visit to the Masur Museum of Art, 1400 South Grand and was very impressed.

ART NEWS HERE AND THERE

With many Americans finding they have more leisure time than ever before, hobbies of all kinds are being encouraged by various sponsors.

Local 807 of the Teamsters Union, New York, N.Y., has formed a Trucking Industry Art Assn. and is seriously considering forming a poetry society. The paintings were exhibited recently and were examples of some very fine work, but somehow it seems to destroy an accepted image.

Chevelle Malibu Super Sport Coupe

Find out what 350 hp feels like

in America's favorite intermediate size car

Next time you're feeling low, come on in and plunk yourself down in the bucket seat of a Chevelle Malibu Super Sport. Flick the ignition—bring that special-order 350-hp power plant to life. Then go find a road and try not to smile.

We think it's the greatest pep pill since weekends—and that goes for the other Chevelle V8's too. The 195-hp. And the 250- and 300-hp jobs we can order for you.

And of course if power doesn't sell you right off, maybe Chevelle's short turning radius and overall handling ease will. Or its Full Coil suspension ride. Or its Super Sport all-vinyl interior with wall-to-wall carpeting. Or its huge trunk.

Or maybe it's just plain old value. We've got a showroom full of comparison materials that prove Chevelle to be a better buy (and we'd be only too proud to show them to you). Just ask us.

But whatever it is that you think might make a Chevelle loyalist out of you, you'll never really know until you get into one—and see how hard it is to get out again.

A Chevelle Malibu Super Sport is downright habit forming.

The vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Musselwhite, presided in absence of the president. Following the business session Mrs. C. R. Tidwell, program chairman, reviewed an article from the Clubwoman magazine, pertaining to the G.F.W.C.'s Diamond Jubilee celebration on December 3, 1900. She pointed out that the G.F.W.C. charter was granted by an act of Congress on March 3, 1901 and signed by President William McKinley.

At conclusion of the afternoon a dessert course was served to Mrs. Armand V. Breard, Mrs. Horace V. Fluker, Mrs. Neal McHenry, Mrs. D. M. Moore, Mrs. B. L. Mulhern, Mrs. Musselwhite, Mrs. A. L. Peters, Mrs. J. T. Pugh, Mrs. F. L. Smith, Mrs. C. R. Tidwell and Mrs. R. L. Wood.

Gloves Add Final Touch To Fashion

NEW YORK — You'll hold fashion in the palm of your hand with a pair of new leather gloves this spring. Soft dress or casual gloves in supple kid, suede, doeskin or pigskin add that final touch that means you're ready to face the world with aplomb.

Detailing is neat and not gaudy in new leather glove styles, reports Leather Industries of America. To suit the season's softer look, most gloves are untrimmed or daintily decorated with a simple scallop, pearl buttons or raised stitching. For festive occasions, a touch of jeweling is in order.

A new leather, used for the complete glove or as trim, is embossed cabretta. These gloves in striking printed patterns or "reptile" markings will make a hand-some addition to your glove wardrobe.

Shortie, four and six-button lengths are best sellers for spring. Colors range from white, bone and taupe through the pastels to the deeper brown tones.

American Hair Artistry Takes Europe By Storm

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

An "American angel look" has just taken European hairdressers by storm. And not by design, says Larry Moore of Cincinnati, the first American hair stylist to win the coveted golden rose award of the Paris festival of hairdressing.

The look that "floored European hairdressers" was the happy combination of American beauty and hair artistry, says Moore, a boyish 36-year-old.

"Everyone who saw the world competitions in Switzerland and the finals later in France was dazzled. It was the Italians who dubbed the girls "the little angels,' and they looked it, says Moore, "with their honey blond hair, white beaded dresses and perfect makeup."

In gaining points to cap the award, Moore was emphasizing his pet look, naturalness. He has long believed in convertible hairdos that can go from daytime styles to evening styles with the addition of a small hairpiece.

"If women learned how to use hair pieces, it would offset contrived hairdos, heavily lacquered balloon heads and other formal hairdos worn to the grocery store — as out of place there as wearing cocktail dresses to shop in."

Many hairdressers in Europe showed these styles, and they looked offbeat next to the neat, casual American styles, he says.

The second hairdo, styled for a ball and recombed from the daytime style, was in a Directoire mood, sort of Madame Recamier, he says.

He converted it from side to center, creating a triangular look of the head with a lift at the crown and bangs — "a neat, stylish, small head with soft bangs that looked like those women wore after the French Revolution when they cut their hair with sheep shears," he explains. It was the only head in the competition that took on a completely new silhouette, he says, and the applause was a tribute to the triumph.

The third hairdo was a young style with eyebrow bangs and a slight lift to the crown. He describes it as a free-flowing movement of hair.

Moore can't top his trophy now, but he can always learn more about hairdressing, he says. Hairdressers in his three shops have won more than 50 awards, so he's glad to be bringing home the biggest of them all.

TIP ON LEFTOVERS

Got leftover raw egg whites or egg yolks? If you are not going to use them right away, freeze them. It's easy to do and they will come in handy in the future. Most standard cookbooks give specific directions for freezing both whites and yolks.

Republican Women Set Meeting

A meeting of the Fifth District Women's Republican Club will be held Thursday, January 14 in the Louis Locke Room of Ouachita Parish Public Library, at 10 a.m.

Leroy Ellis, executive director of the Republican Party, State of Louisiana with headquarters in Baton Rouge, will be speaker for the meeting. His topic will be "The Future of the Republican Party in Louisiana and Conservatism in the United States." Mr. Ellis previously served as state campaign manager for Barry Goldwater during the recent presidential campaign.

A planning meeting for the event was held Monday at the home of Mrs. William L. Mattison, president of the organization, at which time letters and invitations were prepared for mailing to every registered Republican voter in the fifth district.

Other officers of the club in addition to Mrs. Mattison are Mrs. Larry Fox, vice-president; Mrs. Claude Smith, secretary-treasurer and Mrs. Norman H. Smith, publicity.

Husbands Have Most Courage In Choosing Decor

Husbands have more courage to furnish the home in what one wife termed a "far out way" than do the wives, a recent query among club women revealed.

All agreed they hate to see another woman wearing a dress they own. They are positively embarrassed to be at a function where they are dressed the same as another woman.

"We live in a peas-in-the-pod type house," said one. To make hers different she and her husband shopped together, skipping over furniture styles their neighbors had. Several women brightened up and confessed they had done the same.

"There's as much difference in furniture styles as there is in clothes. There's no need for us to have the same tables and chairs as everyone we see all the time," declared a matron who had just gone through the refurnishings process.

"It isn't that you have to go to extremes like combining queer shapes and crazy colors. You just have to choose what you and your family like instead of copying what your friends bought" summed up a young mother.

TART DRESSING

Combine salad oil with seasonings and lemon juice or vinegar to make a tart French dressing for vegetable salads.

STAIN RESISTANT

You've probably heard that carpets made with the new man-made fibers such as Creslan acrylic fiber are more stain-resistant than those made with natural fibers. Know why? The man-made fibers are smoother and more even. There are fewer rough spots and crevices to catch and hold stains.

'65 Look Is Wide-Awake

The strictly '65 look — it's wide-awake, speedy, active and alive . . . cutting hair so it swings free and easy . . . focusing all attention on your eyes. Use taupes, charcoal and muted pastel shades of shadow . . . liners and brow make-up softly, subtly so that all anyone can see are those great, big beautiful eyes. Accentuate the positive — make your face individual, interesting and most of all intense.

White is the brightest way to highlight contours, emphasize certain features and make shadows disappear. Use on your eyelid above the liner, under your brows near the temples, under your eyes, to dim out shadows. Use it on the bridge of your nose to highlight it and make it seem thinner and sharper.

...On Dit...

by Marillyn Taylor

This has been a week for getting back on schedule, for collecting our wits, for cleaning, working, organizing . . . In short, the holidays are over. Clubs, organizations, and civic groups are be-stirring themselves after the holiday recess and/or change of pace. January is a gratifying month, with its time for catching up.

Real working meetings were held yesterday by two of our groups. Northeast Louisiana Branch of Association of American Penwomen met at twelve-thirty for luncheon, followed by a workshop. The meeting, held at Admiral Benbow Inn, was designed for discussion of problems of creative writing.

Ft. Miro chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met at three at Ouachita parish public library's Louis Locke room. FRANCES FLANDERS spoke to the ladies on pursuit of genealogy.

COMING EVENTS cast a long shadow in the case of Little Theatre's annual winter musical. Things were busy, busy, busy at Strauss Playhouse this week with try-outs and casting for "Sound of Music," scheduled for presentation in late February. This well - loved play, longest running musical since "My Fair Lady" on Broadway, was at last reports still showing nightly in London after more than four years there. With its delightful true story and exceptionally tuneful score, it promises to be one of Little Theatres' happiest shows.

Almost two hundred prospective actors showed up for try-outs for "Sound of Music." Voices ranged all the way from good to glorious, promising great things for the final production. Adding those who came to watch or to listen or to offer help backstage or to kibitz, several hundred persons must have visited the theatre during tryouts.

MONROE GARDEN CLUB meets tomorrow for a closed meeting at 2 p.m. at Bayou DeSiard country club. SERENA LEWIS will speak on "Foliage Arrangements".

One of the highlights of the season for members of LOUISIANA TECH CONCERT ASSOCIATION is the presentation of the National Ballet, scheduled for this coming Tuesday, January 12. The company of fifty-five will be seen at two performances: at 2:45 for student membership, 8 p.m. for public membership . FREDERICK FRANKLIN is director of this group, which was recently recognized for its striking achievements with a large grant from the Ford Foundation.

Another coming event is Bayou DeSiard country club's oyster roast, planned for a week from Saturday, on January 23. This affair is one of the most popular on the club calendar, with several planned each year during oyster season. Oysters raw and roasted, boiled shrimp, barbecue ribs, and all the trimmings will be served beginning at 6:30 p.m.

A happy aspect of these unhurried days is the opportunity afforded for catching up on calling. This week we visited the new home of JEAN and ALTON HOWARD, which was completed a few weeks before the holidays. This house of brick is situated on one of those lovely lots found in the gently rolling hills on the outskirts of West Monroe. The tree-shaded knoll overlooks one of the area's small lakes. One approaches the house downhill, on brick steps leading down to the sunken entrance court with its rock garden and fountain. Double walnut doors form the main entrance.

In the entry, white paper printed in gold is used above white wainscoting. Double louvered doors at the right open into the living room, with its gold carpeting and white walls. The sofa is white, and chairs, cerulean blue. A gold curio cabinet stands against one wall. Opposite are a pair of columns topped with statues, standing one at each side of the dining room entrance.

Windows in both living and dining rooms overlook the entrance courtyard. Draperies in both rooms are in two layers: sheer white silk topped with heavy silk shantung appliqued with a gold scroll. White wainscotting is used, with white paper printed with Roman scenes in gold. Furniture is pecan in an Italian provincial design.

Behind the dining room are kitchen and family dining room, both floored with vinyl and papered with brown basketweave vinyl. Kitchen cabinets are of ash, with dozens of special built-in features — those separating work and dining areas open from each side. Brown appliances are built into the counters.

Between kitchen and garage is a passageway featuring some of the most ingenious features of the house. To the right are long windows overlooking the entrance court. On the left are a succession of small rooms: powder room, utility room, Jean's sewing room, Alton's "catch - all" room. These are hardly more than large closets, but carefully planned for maximum usefulness which can be concealed behind louvered doors between uses.

Walls and floor in the family dining room are the same as the kitchen. Pale green draperies printed with panels of fruit cover sliding doors of glass which open onto the patio extending across the back of the house, overlooking the lake. Built - in benches completely surround the patio, with its barbecue pit constructed of brick to match the house.

Three steps down from entrance and from family dining room is the large den, floored in quarry tile and panelled in ash. One wall of brick contains a wood-burning fireplace and sitting-height hearth. Facing this is a king-sized sofa covered in a quilted green and brown print. Other furniture includes a pair of green chairs and an easy chair covered in green and orange plaid. The back wall of the room, including fixed panes of glass and sliding doors, is covered with draperies of gray-green drawn linen.

In the room shared by JANICE, 5, and MARY ALANE, 7, walls are white and windows covered with white shutters. Furniture of white and gold includes a pair of four - poster beds. Sheer white Swiss cotton is used for dust ruffles, draperies, and canopies, with green coverlets . . . Son JOHNNY's room features a masculine theme with draperies printed with old guns. This material is used for dust ruffles, with green coverlets. On the wall above the bed are framed prints of antique guns . . . The downstairs guest room has draperies and bedspread in a blue and green brocaded fabric. The bed is placed before the windows and framed by draperies. An occasional chair is of gilded wood, upholstered with black silk. A black and gold lamp hangs above and to one side of the dresser.

All rooms in this house have lovely views, but the most breathtaking is that from the upstairs guest suite, which overlooks the entire lakefront. The room is equipped with desk, and has the feeling of an office or den. However, the pair of green sofas swing out to form beds, providing extra sleeping space. A pair of chairs, covered with black and white checked material, flank a red chest which stands before the wide windows.

Also upstairs is the long playroom, with its sloping ceiling which follows the roofline. Here are a ping pong table, television, easy chair, cabinet for games. The gun cabinet, decon's bench, and standing card table are of heavy pine. Across the end of the room, is a window seat. Cushion and draperies are of a sporting print.

Did you tackle the trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?
Oh, a trouble's a ton or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it.
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only how did you take it?
You are beaten to earth? Well, well, what's that?
Come up with a smiling face.
It's nothing against you to fall down flat,
But to lie there — that's disgrace.
The harder you're thrown, why the higher you bounce;
Be proud of your blackened eye.
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts;
It's how did you fight and why?

Day Dress Is Casual In Desert Climate

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Q: I will be going to Las Vegas in early February, staying at one of the large hotels. Should I take a summer wardrobe or a winter one? Is it warm enough for sunning at the pool? If only bright colors are worn there, would I have use for a black brocade theater suit? A white silk sheath with beaded sweaters? Would silk slacks or bermudas be useful?

A: A desert climate is warm during the day, suddenly chilly at night. Day clothes can be summery, but take wraps for evening. Black can be worn in the evening, also the white with beaded sweaters. Slacks and bermudas, yes, in fact day dress is usually casual.

Q: My daughter is having a formal February wedding. I would like to wear a sheath dress with jacket, but the fabric puzzles me, as I don't have use for a very dressy outfit later.

A: A jacket costume in a simple blue brocade, even if made long, can be shortened afterward, and the material would not be too dressy for other use. Hat can be a small white velvet, shoes dyed to match or darker blue, simple pump style, handbag a silk faille in brown or blue. Gloves would be white in any event. All this can be used on many other occasions.

Q: I have a powder blue crepe outfit, two-piece. Would champagne shoes, bag and gloves be right with it? What color hat? Could black be worn, too? For jewelry, would a pearl necklace, do, or a crystal with silver chain?

A: Champagne would be better than black, which is too dark and heavy with a pale color like this. Hat could be a deeper blue, white or pale yellow, or a print mixing these colors. It should be soft, in draped turban or toque style. For jewelry, either necklace described will do, but I prefer pearls as showing up better against a pale color.

Q: For a honeymoon in Florida in late February, what seasonal clothes should we take?

A: Temperature will be 75 to 80, so take summer - weight clothes, with a light wrap for evenings.

If you have a question concerning fashion, send it to Florence de Santis, in care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Try Flowers For Dessert

PICKERING, ONTARIO, Canada (AP) — Anyone with a taste for Bavarian cream with marigold petals will be in sympathy with the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Alan McKenzie.

The McKenzies like such food and when they found they couldn't obtain the required herbs they decided to grow their own.

Now the herb garden produces 75 varieties and the flower gardens are full of unusual specimens.

On her shelves may be found jars of dried savory, marjoram, Basil, lemon thyme, tarragon vinegar, jellies of mountain ash and other herbs. If you have that kind of a garden, Mrs. McKenzie says a spread for whole wheat bread may be made from chopped chives, fennel, lemon thyme and tarragon mixed with salted butter.

As for the Bavarian cream with marigold petals, mix one pint of milk, three egg yolks and gelatin, then fold in a cup of pounded marigold petals. Surround the unmolded Bavarian cream with marigold blossoms.

Sue Lynn Dugas Is Bride Of Donnie W. Anderson

White poinsettias, holly and ivory tapers burning in tree candelabra against a stained glass altar formed a setting in the New Chapel of First Baptist Church, Jonesboro for the wedding of Miss Sue Lynn Dugas and Donnie Wayne Anderson. Rev. C. B. Ellis performed the ceremony on Sunday, December 27.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Dugas of Jonesboro and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Sam Anderson, Hodge.

Traditional wedding music was provided by Miss Frances Harvey, who also accompanied the soloist, Jimmie Rogers.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was gowned in candlelight silk peau de soie with scalloped neckline and elbow sleeves of French net appliqued in Alencon lace. The controlled skirt, which terminated in a chapel train, was also appliqued in Alencon lace. Her short tiered veil of silk illusion fell from a crown of seed pearls and lace motifs, topped by a single full blown rose. She wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of white roses centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Eddie Maxwell of Hodge, served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles McLean, Miss Patricia Gregory, Miss Judy Dugas, sister of the bride, all of Jonesboro and another sister, Mrs. Don Ragland of Memphis, Tennessee. They were alternately gowned in short frocks of soft gold and ivy green velveteen, styled with fitted bodices and belled skirts with flat bows at the waist. Matching velveteen Dior bows formed their headpieces and they carried nosegays of miniature gold chrysanthemums tied with green and gold ribbon. Miss Melinda Baker of Jonesboro, flower girl, wore an ivy green velveteen frock identical to the other attendants' and carried a small nosegay. Ring bearer was Bruce Rogers of Jonesboro.

Sherwin Staggs of Hodge, served as best man and ushers were Harold Harvey, David Brown, Freddie Brown, all of Hodge and Don Ragland of Memphis, Tenn.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception in their home on Sixth Street. A large white flocked tree and a jardiniere filled with green foliage and ivy formed a background for the receiving line. The bride's table was covered with white net over taffeta and centered with an arrangement of green holly with red berries, adorned with tiny white bells and doves. Based around the central decor were the bridesmaids' nosegays. Tall scented green candles completed the decor and at either end of the table were the wedding cake and crystal punch service.

Assisting with reception courtesies were Mrs. Jimmy Harrison, Mrs. Dorothy Harvey, Mrs. Harold Harvey, Mrs. Jimmie Rogers, Miss Terri Miller and Miss Mary Elizabeth Negem. Rice bags were presented guests by Misses Mary Loyd and Brenda Bryant.

After a short wedding trip the couple will resume their studies in college.

COPPER BRIGHT

Many copper kitchen utensils come with a colorless film coating over the copper to protect it from discoloration. This is apt to chip and flake off with usage. When this happens, it is best to remove the coating completely by boiling the utensil in a solution of baking soda and water.

REMOVE GLOSS

Remove the gloss from shiny suits with a mixture of cold pure malt vinegar and warm water in equal proportions. Apply with a small brush.

MODERN DAY DOWRY

The traditional gift of sterling silver flatware from the parents of the bride stems from the Greek bride's dowry of silver coins. Our practical ancestors discovered that silver made up into eating utensils was just as valuable and much more easily identified than coins, if stolen.

MRS. DANIEL ALONZO DOUGHTY

Sally Sue Nyhuis Weds Daniel Alonzo Doughty

Miss Sally Sue Nyhuis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nyhuis, 502 Lakeshore Drive, became the bride of Daniel Alonzo Doughty, son of Mrs. A. R. Doughty, 702 Erin, and the late Dr. Doughty, in a double ring ceremony Wednesday, December 30 in Messiah Lutheran Church.

Rev. E. Charles Anderson performed the candlelight ceremony at 7 p.m. following appropriate nuptial music by Mrs. Gerald Merritt, organist and Rev. Walter Mangham Jr., soloist. Speedy Vinson served as acolyte.

Baskets of white gladioli and chrysanthemums and two seven - branched candelabra holding white tapers formed an altar setting for the exchange of vows.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride wore a short gown of white silk organza and Chantilly lace. The bodice was topped with a brief lace jacket, styled with Sabrina neckline and long fitted sleeves. Lace rosettes, etched with sequins were appliqued on the belled skirt. Her veil of silk illusion fell elbow length from a miniature petal - shaped crown of simulated pearls and crystal beads. She carried a bouquet of white feathered carnations and satin streamers encircling a white cattleya orchid.

Mrs. Ted Colvin Jr., of Ruston, served as matron of honor. She wore a scoop-necked dress of pale blue brocade with matching accessories. A bow of blue peau de soie and matching tulle veil formed her headdress and she carried a bouquet of pink glamellias.

Serving as best man was Barry Erwin and ushers were Bruce Nyhuis, brother of the bride and David Aycock of Ruston.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Nyhuis wore a two-piece aqua blue knit with matching aqua feathered hat and coffee cream accessories. Her corsage was a white phalaenopsis orchid. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Doughty, wore a pink wool sheath with pink rosebud hat and matching corsage. Her accessories were in alabaster shade.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Wesley Foundation Social room at Northeast Louisiana State College. White camellias centered the tables which were draped with floor length cloths. The tiered cake, crested with wedding bells and a dove holding two wedding bands was served by Mrs. R. W. McPherson. Miss Kay Colvin presided at the punch bowl and Miss Pam Hinton had charge of the bride's book. Rice bags were presented guests by Miss Kathy Williams.

For their wedding trip to New Orleans the bride changed into a light blue wool sheath with cream accessories and a purple throated white orchid from her bouquet. The couple will be at home at 502 Erin in Monroe. Both are graduates of Ouachita Parish high school and are now attending Northeast Louisiana State College.

Women Prefer Males To Shop

Husbands who think their wives consider it their duty to buy the men's apparel too are doing an injustice, Ron Postal, of the National Council of Men's Fashions, maintains. Nine out of 10 women with whom he has discussed this problem would much rather give the job back to the males. "They want more time to select things for themselves and their daughters, and feel that fathers should choose their own and their sons' clothes," he said.

ENGAGED GIRLS TAKE NOTICE

If you got your engagement ring for Christmas, one of the first things you should do is choose your sterling silver flatware pattern and register it at a jewelry or department store. This simplifies matters for gift givers and shows them you are serious about starting married life with sterling silver.

MISS MARY KATE MAY

Late January Wedding Planned By Area Couple

Engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Mary Kate May and Donald Lee Tolar is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Alfred May of Chatham. The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Tolar, also of Chatham.

The wedding will solemnized on January 30 in the home of the bride's parents at 3 p.m. After a brief wedding trip the couple plans to establish a home in New Orleans.

Miss May, a graduate of Chatham high school, is presently doing secretarial work in Monroe.

Mr. Tolar, also a graduate of Chatham high school, is a senior majoring in civil engineeering at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute.

Houston Girl, Mr. Hatfield Are Engaged

Dr. and Mrs. Jack Gordon Brannon of Houston, Texas, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gay Ann Brannon to Thomas Benjamin Hatfield. The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hatfield of Winnsboro.

The wedding will be an event of early July at St. John the Divine.

Miss Brannon was graduated from Newcomb college and is studying for her master's degree in political science at the University of Michigan.

Her fiance was graduated from Tulane University and is now a graduate student at the University of California in Berkeley.

Gold Jewelry Still Popular

The popularity of gold jewelry continues unabated because of the elegance and richness of karat gold, the Jewelry Industry Council reports. Many of the new creations are being made in 18 or 20 karat yellow gold, giving them a much softer and finer look.

The different finishes, too, are continuing in popularity among gold pieces. These include matt. Florentine, polished and brushed. What's new: a nugget or pebbled finish.

Gourmet Touch Added At Home

Why unstuff an olive? To restuff it more lusciously, of course. Take a toothpick and poke out the pimiento centers. Fill with whipped chive cream cheese and you have a tasty oddment for the salad tray.

A meatball is a meatball, is a meatball, and even more so if you crumble those Italian meatball flavored crackers into the chopmeat mixture before you toss them into shape. Adds real dash to the spaghetti dinner.

INSTANT FOOD

Home Colors Bold, Vibrant

Colors for homes this year are bold and vibrant. Dramatic black and white, vivid reds, bright pinks and tulip yellows are seen in the contemporary settings.

One kitchen has a long row of pink cabinets with charcoal black ring pulls. An even greater eye stopper are the fabric - laminated venetian blinds that close to reveal giant garlands of vivid pink flowers.

Large scale floral designs are in the forefront of the home fashion news. They are splashed on windowshades and draperies, stenciled on carpets and floors — sometimes even on ceilings.

Spring Fashions Offer Nude Or Subdued Look

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Fashion offers women two major looks for spring—the nude and the subdued.

Each is equally becoming, depending on the figure of the wearer. It's just a matter of a woman making a choice between young, swinging skirts inched up two, three and even four inches above the knees, cookie cutter cutouts to expose the epidermis (in bathing suits and evening clothes), and low slug necklines—or of more conservative styles with beauty built from fabrics, drape and color.

The designer world is divided into two camps on the spring trends. For instance, Jacques Tiffeau is an exponent of the daring. Tiffeau, designer for both Monte Sano & Pruzan and Tiffeau & Busch, New York, remarked, "the direction is to easy and young clothes. I think we're getting tired of serious, mannered fashions."

The skirts on the collection for his other firm rode even higher—almost kilt length.

Designer Mollie Parnis took just the opposite tack. Her daytime hemlines for spring covered the knees and there was the easily wearability of natural waistlines and narrow pleated skirts. She also used the prettiness of fabrics and quilted silk print coats over the matching print for dresses.

Said Miss Parnis, "the notion that some of the new clothes will make women look more youthful is nonsense. It only makes them look more infantile . . . I believe most women want to look pretty, chic and sexy, and be seen in lovely clothes that make them look that way."

So it went, as New York's trend - setting fashion houses held a 10 - day series of shows for nation's newspaper, television and radio representatives. The New York couture group sponsors the first seven days of the shows in its 44th "National Press Week" with 250 reporters registered. The American designers group then continues for three days.

These were some of the detailed trends showing in the spring styles:

—An elongated body look marked by longer suit jackets, some finger-tip; tunic dresses; low-slung belts encircling the hipline.

—"Mobile" skirts, with plenty of pleating, flare, even calmed - down versions of the dirndl. Plenty of apron - like panels on both dress and suit skirts.

—Lengths. Short for day, but moving in for late day and evening the "demi-longueur," hitting about mid-calf.

—Colors, going the great white way, from snow white to bone to creamy white. Plenty of bold black and white prints, with apricot and pink everywhere.

Spring Fashions Stress Individualism

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

NEW YORK — Designers who elected to show on the first day of the American Designer Series spring collections, all agreed on one thing: ladies don't wear nutty fashions. They are individualists, but they manage their differences with a truly couture look.

Adele Simpson led off with one of her typically beautiful collections, designed with an eye on good figures. Costumes featured tunics, pleats on pleats, bias - flare cuts. Many jackets were long enough to qualify as little coats.

Fabrics here were slightly textured in fibranne and Barbacane surfaces, or were smooth and trompe l'oeil patterns such as fish scale print or chevron print that looked textured from a little distance. Dark colors such as tobacco or navy were edged and trimmed in sharp white.

Featured details included buttons fastened with loops, slashed necklines and necks self-jeweled to look like scarves. An occasional gay print appeared, as in a sheer red silk skimmer with a wild pink and green print, a stole edged in ostrich.

The fabric story was even more emphatic in the Harry Frechtel coat and suit collection. Ribbon weaves, tree bark silks, a revival of silk pongee, textured jerseys, silk plaids and black and white tweeds made a colorful collection.

Frechtel remains true to the easy look in suits, even when jackets are longer, with skirts paneled, or lightly gathered, sharply pleated when movement is desired. Coats often have stitching accents, as in a shapely reversible taupe and blue wool welt - edged everywhere, over a blue two - piece dress.

Mollie Parnis said openly she wasn't in favor of ladies aping teens, and her French - born designer, Sara Ripault, knows how to give that fillip to charming clothes that makes them new. The daytime look rests on the costume, often with open jackets crisply tailored, hip - length, in such fabrics as white silk with woven navy dots. Another open jacket costume was in thin, white ribbed jersey for the jacket and tunic overblouse, navy for the skirt. Skirts in this collection showed the influence of the Paris hint at wider skirts, with subtle gathers to get the straight but not narrow line.

The evening dress specialist of the day was Greek - born George Stavropoulos, who gets better, it seems, with each collection. His individualism rests on his way with classic drapery, an inspiration from his native land.

A street - length flesh - color chiffon showed how chiffon could look new again, with one-shoulder fluid bias cut, back fullness to the skirt from gathering at the waistline. For at-home in the grand manner, he does smoke blue chiffon floor - length, with a bodice cut like a shirt, worn with diamond cufflinks.

After so many delightful ideas, a strong collection was needed for a finish, and John Moore certainly supplied it. Here, again, is a designer who has steadily espoused the soft look no matter what others were doing, and does it with a newness of cut all his own.

There's not a straight skirt in the collection, with every one moving with inverted, unpressed pleats or bias - cut flare. A sky-blue linen costume had a shapely and cutaway jacket with scalloped edging, as did the bias - cut dress beneath. A little navy wool suit had what John Moore calls a "nanny" look, with bishop sleeves, white pleated little ruffle inside the neck and bonnet hat, a flared-hem skirt.

His coats are front shaped with curved seams, seem to flow forward from a rounded back. In dresses he knows how to handle the dolman cut superbly, with a high waist rising beneath it in a grape, black and white paisley print silk. He also has a circular drape that looks dolmanish but isn't, and a princess cut with wider flare to the skirt and a dolman sleeve.

His evening gowns are soft but individual. A long slim black lace covering heavy white crepe looks like a beautifully shaped nightgown. A full - skirted rose moire taffeta has a hem in many rows of ruffles. A completely tiered white chiffon has each tier edge scalloped.

Vivid Colors Highlight '65 Furniture Fabrics

Fabrics dominate the scene of this year's new furniture designs, and their mood is definitely romantic and glowing with excitement. Color is vibrantly alive in '65! There is a plentiful assortment of texture, pattern and much that is new and imaginative. Some is nostalgic with echoes of art nouveau that flourished around the turn of the century and is starting to grow again. Color is rampant and treatments are romantic. Large-scaled floral patterns bloom at random on upholstery material, almost without repeat. The all-over pattern seems to supersede sprays or clusters, and the prints are sharply drawn.

Coordination seems to be the order of the day, with a duplication of pattern on fabrics of different weights and densities for use as draperies, upholstery, wallcovering or sheer curtains. The "one pattern" look is "in".

In addition to over-sized florals, stylized damasks, bold stripes, herringbone, tweeds and jacquards all have their place in the sun. The prints veer more toward the traditional, with contemporary colorations; the wovens move toward contemporary. Sharp color contrasts are evident in all treatments.

The "velvet" look is one of great importance and consists of a whole family of related fabrics: velvet, cut velvet, corduroys, chenille, suede cloth. These are solids, striped or printed, in an array of hues ranging from vivid to muddy or subdued.

Cottons are in wide use as is linen and combinations of the two as well as the man-made materials. Vinyl takes a new direction in a pebbly straw effect with shantung finish, or in prints combined with solid for use on rattan and wrought iron furniture. Even "flocked" vinyl is seen with trapunto detail.

All the new fabrics set a new high fashion note in upholstery, and are compatible with the fat "in" look of over-plump cushioning in which latex foam rubber plays such an important role. Its hidden assets are super-comfort and non-plumping convenience.

The use of soil and stain-resistant finishes is prevalent . . . . more so than ever. Modern technical improvements such as this and super-soft foam rubber "innards" add a practical element to the new upholstery offerings.

As for color, it runs riot everywhere. Contrasts are sharp, with dark on light backgrounds, multi-color effects in stained glass hues are rich and vivid as are solids in deep greens, reds and gold. Greens seem to be first and foremost with olive and bronze shades in the vanguard followed by willow and yellow greens. They combine popularly with blues ranging from almost navy through cerulean to softer, lighter shades. The brilliant clear blues are prevalent, and all shades of red are coming up fast. Yellows range through orange and into the brown, tawny family. Through all this vividness of color runs a faint thread of a future trend . . . the pastels, seem mainly in the more traditional treatments, which at times approach what decorators call the "no nothing" color because of its almost chalky, white look. Pale beige, mustard, salmon, chamois. . .these are the colors on the wave of the future.

Floral Print Adds Interest To Bedroom

By BETTY PEPIS

Q: My bedroom has pale pink walls. Furniture is white Provincial and the bedspread is reversible white. What color for rug, curtains and accents?

A: A pleasing floral print for curtain and dust ruffle would give some interest to room. Print could have a pale pink ground with white and lettuce green. Have lettuce green for scatter rugs and small accessories. Lamps could be white.

Q: My living and dining room are both small with an open shelf divider between the two rooms. Walls and carpet in both rooms are gold. Draperies are now in a block design on a cream ground with predominant colors in olive green, lemon and muted cranberry. One modern chair is in an olive green multistripe. What color for a Danish sofa and chair? There is a long, low table-bench in front of floor-length windows. Should this have a cushion and what color? If I change draperies what color should these be?

A: Because rooms are not large, cover the Danish pieces in gold, a shade more intense than the wall color. Change draperies to gold that matches the wall color. Yes, have cushions on table-bench in a sharp olive green. Small accessories in room could be in a Bristol blue.

Q: Walls and ceilings in my living room are a cream-beige, rug is beige too and one chair is covered in an oyster white. What color do you suggest for sofa" It stands in front of windows. What color for draperies? I'd prefer a floral print to solid color; what for toss pillows?

A: The drapery print would be most suitable if it is in a pale beige ground with the print in, for instance, such colors as lime green, citrus yellow and sky blue. Sofa could be beige with toss pillows in solid yellow and blue. Extra chair could be in print or in a soft lime green.

Q: Living room walls, woodwork and ceiling are off-white. Sofa slip cover is in a off-white ground print with gold, pale rust and a brown green. Draperies are gold. What colors do you suggest for a rocker, an occasional chair and an area rug?

A: The rocker could be covered in a small check in off-white and rust. The area rug could be gold and repeat gold again for the occasional chair. Have off-white for lamps and pick up the brown green in some small accessories.

Mrs. Fred Huenefeld Jr., president, opened the meeting with New Year's greetings and the club collect was repeated in unison. Mrs. Huenefeld announced that the Louisiana Garden Club Federation will sponsor its first Conservation Conference on January 19 in Alexandria. MRS. JOSEPH MARTIN WALLACE

Wallace-Allgood Vows Read In Ruston Church

Miss Judith Elaine Allgood and Joseph Martin Wallace exchanged wedding vows in a candlelight ceremony on December 29 in the First Baptist Church of Ruston. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wayne Allgood of Ruston and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Wallace of Converse.

Officiating at the 5:30 p.m. ceremony were Rev. Sammy A. Dyson and Dr. Clyde Fant Jr. Wedding music was provided by Mrs. J. D. Middlebrooks of Angola, organist and Gary Lanier, Pineville, soloist.

A massive arrangement of white gladioli, and chrysanthemums accented with red poinsettias and greenery which centered the altar was flanked by three seven branched candelabra holding white tapers. Twin waxed greenery and poinsettia arrangements completed the setting. The chancel rail and family pew markers were of poinsettias, holly and red velvet ribbon.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of candlelight slipper satin, styled with longline bodice with reembroidered lace around the neckline. Long sleeves tapered to points over her hands and the wide skirt, worn over hoops, swept to a full train in back. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls. She wore a lavaliere of garnets and pearls, family heirloom presented her by her paternal grandmother, and carried a bouquet of white glamellias on a white Bible.

Miss Carolyn Crowder of Jackson, La., served as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Catherine Brandon, Pinckneyville, Miss., Miss Gayle Wallace, Converse; Miss Betty Garrett, St. Francisville, Miss Mary Ellen Grayson and Miss Ann Page Grayson, both of Vidalia. They wore formal gowns of white brocade, featuring brief jackets, controlled skirts and wide cummerbunds which formed flat bows. Their headpieces were bandeaux of white velvet and their bouquets comprised red carnations with holly and red velvet ribbon.

Lynn Wallace of Slaughter attended the bridegroom as best man and serving as groomsmen - ushers were Ron Henderson, St. Louis, Mo., Ray Ford of Epps; Elmer R. Ewing Jr., Pineville; Girault Bird, Sicily Island and Dan Wallace of Vidalia.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a blue silk linen sheath with lace overblouse. The bridegroom's mother was wearing a beige brocade model.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church social room. Arrangements of gladioli, chrysanthemums, poinsetttias and greenery were used throughout the area.

The bride's table was covered with an imported white cutwork cloth and centered with a branched candelabra holding white tapers, tied with a cluster of deep scarlet velvet ribbon. The bridesmaids' bouquets were grouped around the base of the candelabra. Mrs. Sammy A. Dyson served the tiered wedding cake, which was topped with wedding bells and tiny red poinsettias and presiding at the punch bowl at the opposite end of the table were Mrs. J. W. Peniston of Sicily Island and Mrs. Hal Dulaney, Alexandria. Mrs. A. F. Clagett of Baker, was at the bride's book. Others assisting were Mrs. B. L. Sarradet, Shreveport and Mrs. W. R. Grayson, Vidalia, and tea girls were Miss Rita Ewing, Pineville; Miss Lynn Garrett, St. Francisville and Miss Barbara Cook, Pineville.

For their wedding trip to Hot Springs, Ark., the bride was wearing a candy pink wool suit with winter white accessories, matching flower hat and pink cymbidium orchid. They will be at home in Alexandria. The bride was graduated from St. Francisville high school and Mr. Wallace finished high school at Oak Grove. Both are now attending Louisiana College.

Bring Summer Indoors With Gay Flowers

The flowers that bloom in the summer look good in the garden, and when fall and winter come there are flowers that still brighten the Inside of the house.

Artificial flowers are so perfectly made these days it is difficult to tell them from nature's own, and they never wilt or fade.

There is a wide selection to choose from, and by assembling a collection of garden flowers you can create your own arrangements and change them at will, just as with fresh flowers.

One of the most attractive ways they can be utilized is in hanging baskets of rattan. They come in a variety of styles, such as a bird cage, a flower basket and another that can best be described as an inverted coolie hat.

Flower arrangements of varied assortments are contained in the baskets and displayed just as the real ones. However, if you wish to make your own floral arrangements, artifical flowers can be purchased separately. And if you would like to know more about flower arranging, helpful instruction booklets are available. These make the happy task of creating your own arrangements much more interesting and it will add to your sense of achievement.

For one attractive arrangement try pink hydrangea with blue delphinium. Group three hydrangeas in a low arrangement and then add height with the delphinium. Deep yellow marigolds backgrounded with variegated tropical leaves will be a spot of bright color in dark areas of the house.

Snapdragon is another flower that combines beautifully with many other flowers. For a triangular arrangement of blue iris and pink or white snapdragon, in a low rectangular container to form a composition that will elicit praise. Cut the stems of the irises in varying lengths, starting with very short-stemmed cones and building up to the apex of the pyramid with the snapdragon.

Zinnias inevitable suggests summer. Try an arrangement of pink ones with yellow marigolds in another triangular form. Zinnias have a homey qualify that makes them compatible with a simple earthenware jar.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Warped Personality Demands Punishment

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter has been going with a boy for two years. He is 20. She is 23.

When Celeste met Jack he was in the service. He spent weekends at our home whenever he could get a pass. After he was discharged he practically moved in. He drove Celeste to work in her car, entertained himself all day (said he couldn't find a job), then picked her up at work.

Jack ate every meal at our home until I got sick of seeing his face and ordered him, in my daughter's presence, to pack his clothes and leave. He told Celeste she had to choose between him and her family. When she chose her family he slapped her face and left.

Three weeks later Celeste made a trip to Jack's home town to see him. Last week she went again. This morning she told us she is going to marry him. I know Celeste is using her savings to pay his debts and they will be flat broke.

Why would a lovely girl do this to herself? I need your help. — A VIRGINIA MOTHER

Dear Mother: The lovely girl has a warped personality which demands punishment. Such sick chicks invariably select someone who will furnish them with plenty.

You can do nothing but stand by. After Jack knocks her block off a few times she may come home. If she does, don't say "I told you so." Urge her instead to get professional help or she'll probably marry another character who will treat her the same way.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter in your column from the idiot who said "Money is king. It can buy you all the friends in the world. Without it you're a dead duck."

I wish there was some way I could make that kid understand how wrong he is. I was born with a platinum spoon in my mouth. When I was 15 I had my own car. (No driver's license, but that didn't make any difference to my parents. They were determined that I was going to be popular.)Every morning there were five or six kids on the porch, waiting for a ride. I used to buy the gang, sodas, cokes, malts, hamburgers take them to the movies and ball games.

One day my English teacher took me aside and told me I was a bright boy but I had a few stupid ideas. She suggested I stop playing Santa Claus and see what happened. She was right. When I quit shelling out and hauling kids around it was like I developed some loathsome disease. Nobody came near me.

Today I have a few friends, but they are devoted and genuine. I wouldn't trade one of them for 100 of the others. — SMARTER NOW

Dear Now: A wise man once said, "The way to make friends is to treat people well. The way to lose friends is to treat them often."

Individuals who knock themselves out entertaining, gifting and catering to people feel inadequate. They are using the bankroll to solidify friendships — and it never works.

Confidential to NEVER RIGHT IN MY LIFE: He is not an objective judge, so forget it. Even a clock that isn't running is right twice a day.

Confidential to ENTITLED TO REVENGE. Sorry, but I don't agree. Granted, you were treated shabbily, but a gentleman never tells. If you sell the girl down the muddy river because she "had it coming" you'll only degrade yourself.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the booby-traps of teenage drinking, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Teen-age Drinking," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Curved Toes Favored In Spring Shoes

On the loveliest leather footwear, announces Shoe Fashion Service of Leather Industries of America, toes have curved and widened to a smart, comfortable new line. From party to play to work - a - day shoes, the rounded flattened "crescent" holds the center of the arena.

Happily, women have elected to return the curve to fashion, and their footwear is no exception. With the once popular "point" all but shoved off-stage, the rounded crescent shares its audience with a few supporting players. There's the squarish "blunt," mostly in suit and walking shoes; the wide flat "duck bill," breezy and young; and of course, the completely open toe.

The lower the heel on her new shoes, the wider the toe is apt to be. As the heel rises, a balance is maintained by narrowing the shoe tip.

Hopping back to the heel, heights remain at mid-level for most informal and dress footwear. Where heel shape is concerned, however, variety has never been greater. In casual and tailored shoes, women favor the popular set-back heel — either chunky or slim. Other casuals include the block heel, stacked leather heel, and low rounded heel.

Dress heels, for the most part, are slim and mid-height. They may have a pinched-in curviness, an underslung grace, a semi set-back look. However, fashion independents will be able to find low flat heels on very elegant leather shoes for the most formal occasions.

FORTHCOMING marriage of Miss Rosemary Egenhoff to Carlton Silmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Silmon of Spencer, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Egenhoff of Fairbanks. A late January wedding is planned.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID SAMUEL ADLER

Baptist Church Scene Of Adler-Rogers Wedding

Ridge Avenue Baptist church was scene of the ceremony Friday, January 1 which united in marriage Miss Melba Ann Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Josh J. Rogers, 205 Otis St., West Monroe and David Samuel Adler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Adler, 1506 Emerson, Monroe.

Rev. H. P. Sampson performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m. following a prenuptial concert by Mrs. Larry Maxwell, organist and Willie James Rogers, cousin of the bride, soloist.

Potted palms were placed on steps leading to the altar where large arrangements of white chrysanthemums were mounted on white pedestals at either side. Masses of greenery formed a background setting and white tapers in brass candelabra completed the scene.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a three-piece suit of white silk double knit with matching pillbox hat, embellished with seed pearls which held her short tulle veil. She carried two purple-throated white orchids on a white satin muff.

Miss Floyce Norwood, maid of honor, wore an emerald green satin sheath, styled with scoop neck, and long sleeves. Her headpiece was a green satin rose with matching tulle veil and completing her ensemble were emerald shoes. She carried two large yellow cymbidium orchids attached to a yellow satin muff.

Gary Pappas attended Mr. Adler as best man and ushers were Jamie Lee Wilhite and Leon Billings.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Rogers wore an ensemble of pink brocade satin with matching pillbox hat, pink shoes and bag and white kid gloves. Her corsage was of pink rosebuds. Mrs. Adler, mother of the groom, wore a blue wool sheath with black accessories, white gloves and a corsage of two pink cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Jamie Lee Wilhite, registered guests in the bride's book placed on a table in the vestibule of the church, where a memory candle was displayed.

The bride wore her wedding suit for their trip to Dallas, Texas. Mr. Adler is presently with the marines, stationed at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. The couple will be at home in Monroe following his discharge in several months.

MRS. HARRELL BOND JR.

Carolyn Gray Becomes Bride Of Harrell Bond Jr.

Vows uniting Miss Carolyn Gray and Harrell Bond Jr. were solemnized in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest B. Gray, 1401 South 12th. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrell Bond Sr., of Jonesboro.

Rev. E. D. Morris performed the double ring ceremony in a candlelight setting on December 26 at 8 p.m.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a cocktail length gown of white poinsettia designed peau de soie. The scalloped neckline was etched with tiny seed pearls, and long sleeves tapered to lily points over her hands. She wore a pearl droplet and matching earrings and her shoulder length veil was held in place by a crown of white net leaves, outlined with pearls and crystals. She carried a cascade of white feathered carnations surrounding a large white orchid with tiny bows of blue satin, and backed with a white satin heart silhouette.

White poinsettias and white candles formed the mantel arrangement, which provided a setting for the exchange of vows. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the den where the bride's table was centered with an arrangement of white pompons, accented with blue and green foliage. The table was draped with a white lace cloth over blue. Miss Marilyn Gaines, cousin of the groom, served the tiered wedding cake, which was adorned with tiny blue flowers and green leaves. Miss Bunnie Bond, sister of the groom, presided at the bowl of blue punch, in which blue and green ice cubes floated.

The guest book was in charge of Miss Shirley Liles.

For the occasion Mrs. Gray wore a dress of mint green with black accessories and the groom's mother wore a red crepe model with black accessories. Both mothers had corsages of white carnations.

Living Plants Complement Home Decor

This Spring the nation's top interior designers are echoing the sentiments of Ellen Lehman McCluskey, F.A.I.D., who says, "I never do a room without plants or flowers."

The importance of living plants, expertly selected to complement home decor, has long been recognized by leading professional decorators, and is being understood by more and more homemakers. The growing concern of American women with tasteful living and the example of "decorator rooms" that have become a part of department store furniture displays, have contributed to the awareness of the role of living plants in decoration.

With the contemporary look high among our national preferences in furniture styling, Mrs. McCluskey thinks that plants are a "must" to soften the boxy, rectangular air of modern rooms and furniture.

Though all styles of furniture will be enhanced by living plants and flowers, some expert advice on specific plants may help you make your selections.

Mrs. McCluskey suggests "that tropical plants go very well with contemporary furniture," and that "these large clay-potted green plants are particularly effective in contemporary and provincial settings." In more formal traditional rooms she prefers cut flowers or delicate flowering plants, "double-potted" into porcelain pots to harmonize with color schemes or a more formal 18th century background. William Pahlmann, another of this country's trend-setters in the design field, and a Fellow of the American Institute of Design, suggests outsized green plants as excellent choices of modern decor, too.

Among the large scale foliage plants recommended — all varieties of Philodendron; Podocarpus; Dracaena; Schefflera, and Norfolk Island Pine.

Mr. Pahlmann and Mrs. McCluskey both recommend choosing foliage and flowering plants that add a "decorative plus" to room settings — plants that are associated with a particular style or era. If you're an enthusiast of Victorian furniture now staging a comeback, a large clay-potted Palm will add to the mood of the room. Ferns and Rubber plants are also reminiscent of the period and the latter go well with French provincial room settings, too.

Those whose preferences are for period furniture like English or French Regency, Empire, Georgian, etc., should use smaller plants to blend with the more delicate scale of the furniture. Flowering plants are interesting in this type of room. Much use is made of the smaller foliage plants also, expecially the "flowing" varieties like ivy.

Though clay pots can be used attractively even in the most formal of settings, some period furniture looks best with decorative jardinieres. In these cases, "double-pot" your plants, slipping the clay-potted plant into the decorative outer container and packing the space between with peat moss. This way you insure the health of your plants, while not disturbing you decorative arrangements.

Soft Little Suits Seen

Plaids and checks are favored for softer suits, in new combinations like chocolate chip with white, navy and white houndstooth, apple green with yellow and white.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

'Modest Mansion' Styling Southern Colonial Feature

By ANDY LANG

The elegance of the true Southern Colonial home has been unsurpassed for many decades. This type of home, with its two-story colonnade, has always connotated a truly gracious way of life. Its influence, however, has not been confined to the South. If you have ever driven through other parts of the country, you have seen many houses and mansions in this style dotting the countrysides and city scapes.

The latest House of the Week is a contemporary adaption of the Southern Colonial. It remains fairly true to style while nevertheless providing all the necessary amenities for modern living. Its over-all size is comfortable, yet modest enough to fit most budgets; in essence, it's what you might call a "modest mansion."

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-65.

FOUR FACADES

Little explanation is needed for the exterior of Design H-65. It is composed of four well-balanced facades. The windows are large, symmetrically placed and flanked by full-length shutters. The exterior material is a narrow clapboard to add to the authenticity. The plan itself is simple and straightforward for economy in framing. In fact, the only extra frill is the two-story portico, which gives it that "mansiony" look.

The main entrance to this four-bedroom home is via a paneled reception foyer, preceded by a vestibule flanked with closets on both sides. Folding doors lead to the dining room on one side. Opposite the dining room is the formal living room — a three - exposure expanse, sunken two steps and boasting an old-fashioned high ceiling of more than nine feet. There are windows at the front and the sides, with a sliding glass door leading to the covered rear porch.

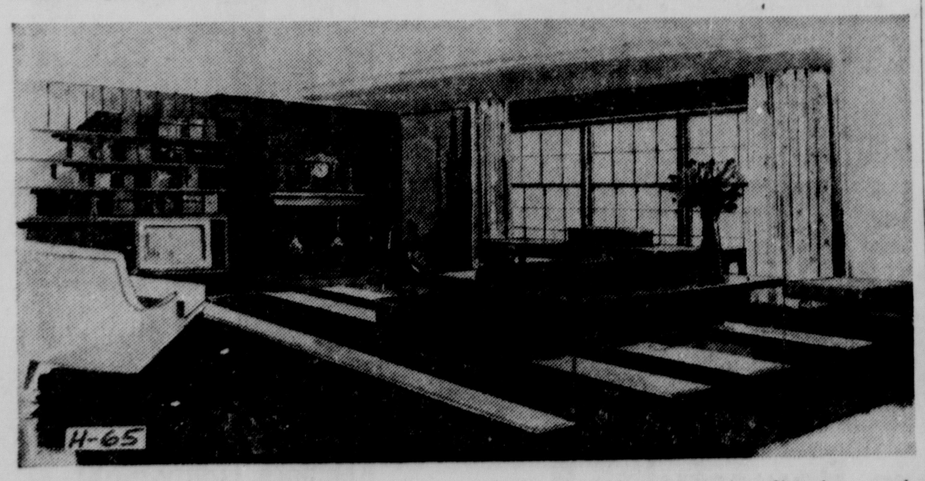

To the rear of the foyer is a spacious family room and kitchen ensemble. A sense of space has been created by architect Samuel Paul by eliminating the conventional partition between the two, although an attractive separation is provided by the kitchen cabinets. There is more than enough counter space, an abundance of closet room and all the usual modern appliances, including a dishwasher. The family room is highlighted by a corner brick fireplace with a stone hearth. The room also has a storage closet and three large windows overlooking the rear patio. A barbecue on the patio adjoins the family-room fireplace.

A compact service area, next to the kitchen, includes a mud room, full laundry space, two closets and a lavatory. There is an outside entrance, as well as an entrance to the two-car garage.

SECOND FLOOR

On the second floor, with its four bedrooms, one finds an especially convenient layout. The three children's bedrooms have plenty of closet space, with the closets located to act as sound deadeners between any two of the rooms. A roomy foyer leads to these rooms, to one of the bathrooms and to the large master bedroom. The latter has a full bath, complete with a stall shower; a walk-in closet plus another closet; and a large deck reached via a sliding door. The master bedroom by itself is 20' long; including the deck, the expanse is 27'8", which is also the depth of the entire house, minus the portico. The front dimensions of the house are 60' 4", which includes the garage.

ON THE HOUSE

AP Newsfeatures

If you've never done it, painting a ceiling while standing on the floor sounds a little ridiculous. But it is being done every day quite successfully.

I had heard about it for several years, but not until recently did I get a chance to try it out. Aside from the fact that my neck ached a little after I was through, everything worked out pretty much as everyone said it would. It took about one-fourth less time than ordinarily, due to the fact that climbing up and down a ladder was eliminated, except for the painting of the strips of ceiling next to the walls.

To paint the ceiling in this way, you need a roller, plus a long extension handle. It takes a few minutes to get used to wielding this contraption, but after a while you have no trouble. The trick, if there is one, is to paint an area of the ceiling slightly ahead of where you're standing rather than painting the section directly above you.

The principles of painting a ceiling with a roller are the same whether you are standing on the floor or on a ladder or work platform.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Arrangement Accessories

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Arrangements Using Accessories", was the theme of the program presented by The Highland Study Club of West Monroe, last Wednesday, for the Fifth District Garden Center's weekly program. This is an ideal time of the year to feature these little delightful objects as focal points in our designs, or use them simply as accessories within the composition.

There are times when flowers are less plentiful and we seek for arranging ideas other than for fresh cut flowers. Line materials are never scarce since we have so many delightful evergreens, budding branches, and suitable foliage. Even the bare branches or dried manzanita in it's natural tones prove to be excellent for the line of the design into which we may use our favorite ceramic figurine. I am often accused of using driftwood excessively. I find it quite versatile and always inspiring.

When asked the question, "when is it proper to use our accessories"? I would certainly answer anytime the opportunity presented itself. An accessory may be defined as any object that the arranger finds suitable or harmonious to the design she is making, blending into the picture mood, idea and theme. Sometimes the accessory inspires the mood or theme of the design. The important thing to watch is that the accessory is in proper scale, color, and texture, as well as balance. So often, a design can fail because of the accessory if these principles are not observed with greatest care and consideration. We know that whenever an accessory is used we create interest in our design. It should be handled as one of the most important of the elements within the design with other elements. It contains lines, color, texture, and gives idea or theme.

SEVEN DESIGNS

Seven excellent designs made with accessories were brought by the members of Highland Study Club. Mrs. Sidney Swink, the president, can be very proud of her club's representatives. These designs, containing, fresh as well as dried materials, would be suitable for the den or family room in the home since they were informal and depicting natural scenery.

As a rule this type arrangement is enjoyed more than any other kind in our homes because they require very little care and tend to set a mood depicting the great out-of-doors. It soothes our nerves and plays on the imagination. Like a picture of a natural scene we never tire of it.

Mrs. A. B. Smith made two designs. One contained unusual material found in the woods. A large mushroom, light tan in color, was placed in the focal area of her triangle design within a line of loquat branches. The base was a section of a cedar round. The color of the loquat centers, the mushroom and the cedar block blended beautifully. A real conversational piece. For her second design, simplicity being the keynote, Mrs. Smith used one curving branch (root) resembling an old leafless tree for the line of her design on a part of log round. Woods fungus was placed around the base of this (tree). For focal interest a light brown ceramic duck was placed to the right of the fungus, adding life to the scene.

Mrs. Floyd Adams was inspired to use a natural tinted ceramic partridge for her accessory within a line of natural, fresh greenery. The three branches of pine formed the line in a cup holder placed to one side of a cutting block (chop board). With the pine, lower, was placed variegated eleagnus, ivy and acuba japonica. All of these materials blended together splendidly just as nature blends the greenery in the wood's landscape. The brown of the pine's branches matched the brown of the partridge, thus tying the two together.

NATURAL FOLIAGE

Mrs. Grayson Hicks, also used natural green foliage in her scenic design, inspired by a green ceramic frog. For line she used the equisedium, followed with ivy, viburnum, and variegated acuba. The lower line was filled in with podocarpus and ivy, forming the triangle design on a large piece of iron stone. The large green frog perched at the foot of the design as though it really belonged in real harmony.

Mrs. J. F. Smith made two designs. One was inspired by the coral she brought home from Florida last summer. The large white mushroom (bowl) coral served as a base for a cluster of the lacy finger coral which blends from white into brown. For accent, and contrast she placed a line of variegated aspidestra (tiered) to the back side of the coral and placed several loops of these leaves to the front, finishing the established line. This design really created interest — a real conversational attraction. For her second design Mrs. Smith used the manzanita bush for her miniature (tree), anchored into a brass container into styrafoam covered with large rocks. There were two feathered, brightly colored birds perched within it's branches, peering into a small bird's nest. To complete the scene a small ceramic frog perched on the rocks within the container at the foot of the tree.

The last design for the show was made by Mrs. W. B. Sanders. Five curving stems of pussy willow formed the spiralling line in a low irregular shaped bowl (black). The focal interest was added by placing one large purple dawn camellia low in the design. The leaves of the camellia formed a background and added strength to the line. The accessory was a graceful ceramic bird (matching container) with its long graceful lines harmonizing with the line of the pussy willow. A delightful design to look at and enjoy in the home, and I'm sure this is one of Mrs. Sanders favorite accessories.

Wednesday, the Oriental Study Club will present the program. Mrs. H. A. Malone is president of the club.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Yew Tree's Relatives

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Here in the south, we cannot grow very successfully the famous yew trees out of which the English made the long-bows which defeated the French at Crecy and Poictiers. We can easily grow some relatives of the yews which look very much like them, however. Podocarpuses and plum-yews (cephalotaxus) have never been widely planted in Southern yards and gardens for some reason or other, and we have been missing some very beautiful evergreens for the shade.

The dark green needle-like foliage of plum-yews and podocarpuses is arranged on the twigs like double-edged combs. As a matter of fact, these leaves are just enlarged needles, and both of these groups are in the Pine family. While their seeds occur in sticky, resin-filled fruits that look like plums, botanists nevertheless place them with the pines, spruces and firs.

USED IN RITES

For tradition's sake, we southerners might plant plum-yews and podocarpuses around our churches because, in olden times, the English planted yews in their church yards. On Palm Sunday, the yew boughs were blessed and worn by worshippers in place of palm fronds. Some of the boughs were then kept until next year and were burned, and the ashes were used on Ash Wednesday.

The yews around old English churches today lend a solemn tone to the landscape. Before the coming of Christianity, the ancient peoples of the British Isles had planted yews about their places of worship. When Gregory the Great sent Augustine to Britain, he instructed him to take over the pagan shrines rather than to destroy them, and thus it was that these noble trees were kept around the churches. Today, the dense, dark green yews lend an air of permanence and peace to gardens and residences wherever they are planted.

The Chinese podocarpus which one sees so much of in the Low Country is hardier than most people realize. It grows into an upright shrub 10 or 15 feet tall. In our colder regions here in the hill country of the south, the new growth is sometimes killed back by extreme weather.

Flower Show Schools Set At Louisiana Tech

The Fifth District Federated Garden Clubs will conduct a series of flower show schools, it was announced by Mrs. John Tolar, Fifth District Garden Center secretary in Monroe.

The first school will be held in the Agriculture Building at Louisiana Tech, Ruston, January 18, 19, 20. Fee for the school will be $5.

Instructors will be C. G. Hobgood, head of the department of agronomy at Tech; Mrs. J. D. Murry, Shreveport, flower arrangement; and Mrs. Paul Bourg, Hodge, flower show practice.

Officials have suggested that every club send enough members to enable it to have a panel of judges. Members of Federated Garden Clubs may take the course to receive credit toward an amateur judging certificate, but any wishing to take the study for purposes of information only, may do so.

Mrs. Tolar said that club presidents should inform chairmen of the Flower Show School of the approximate number of prospective students for the first school. The chairmen are Mrs. Ann Mooney and Mrs. Paul Bourg, Box 512, Hodge, La.

Plant Trees This Month

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

January is an ideal time to plant trees and shrubs, but remember the following tips if you want the plants to grow. Never allow the roots to be exposed to the air. When the roots dry out you will likely lose the plant. Dig holes large enough for natural spread of roots. It's a good idea, says Neil Odenwald, our horticulturist, to separate the top soil from the subsoil when digging the hole.

Use the top soil next to the roots, add leaf mold, peat moss or other organic matter to improve the very compact soil around the roots and water well to eliminate any air pockets. Stake large trees to prevent any movement of trunk that may break soil away from roots. Wrap trunks of large trees to prevent sun scald.

IDENTITY

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want a holly to produce berries, you must have a female tree. To identify the female trees look for a tiny green berry in the center of each flower in the spring. A male flower will have an open center. A male and female tree must be near each other if berries are to be produced.

If you are sure that you have a male and female tree and the tree does not produce berries it could be that the tree is too young. They usually flower for the first time between four and seven years. Another reason for the female tree not to berry, the flowers may have been injured by a late freeze, and unfavorable weather at the time of blossoming prevents effective pollination by insects.

WOODEN SALAD BOWLS

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, want a good wooden salad bowl, look for bowls made of walnut, beech, gum, birch, cherry or maple. Bowls may be finished or unfinished, but if you finish yours, be sure to use a water proof varnish. Many homemakers prefer to leave the inside of their bowls unfinished so they take on seasoning of the salads, the garlic, onions, salts and oils. Some homemakers season the bowls first with mineral oil or some other sweet oil. Avoid letting acid dressings or any liquid stand long in a wooden salad bowl.

To clean a wooden salad bowl, use warm or cool mild suds, whisking the bowl quickly through the water. You, Mrs. Homemaker, may prefer to simply wipe them out, rinse and dry. Be sure to dry bowls thoroughly and do not stack them until they are completely dry inside and out.

DID YOU KNOW

Every time the 4,000 midshipmen of the U. S. Naval Academy sit down to a steak dinner, they put away more than a ton of beef. If hamburgers are on the menu, they eat from 1,600 to 1,800 pounds. More than half a million pounds of beef are consumed at Annapolis each year.

Cereals may some day be used to make better paper. The U. S. Department of Agriculture chemists find that using a cereal derivative in paper manufacture increases the paper's resistance to water.

An open jar of peanut butter keeps best in the refrigerator.

PLASTIC COAT HANGERS

Clothes cleaned in a coin dry-cleaning establishment may come out smelling like cleaning fluid. It's good idea to air the clothes thoroughly before use or storage. Hang them outdoors or in a well ventilated room, but do not use plastic hangers.

Sometimes enough solvent is left in heavy fabrics to soften the plastic even though the fabric does not feel damp. Then the hanger sticks to the fabric so that it is difficult to remove without damaging the garment. The same thing can happen if garments are hung on plastic hangers and exposed to fumes from moth preventives.

"TOPS IN ROSES" 1965

'Consider the Rose'
Consider the rose, she lives but a while,
Yet, she wears her lovely smile.
Her beauty tho' fleeting, defies the years,
a memory recalled thru sadness and tears.
Each hour's a year in her life's span,
as her purpose she serves in God's infinite plan.
She sorrows not - youth soon fades and goes,
Her mission fulfilled - she's been a rose!
Let us too reflect, thru generous deed, beauty and service our own chosen creed.
Give today of ourselves, for time shorter grows, pattern we then our lives as the rose.

CURTAIN CALL

By JACQUE BIEGENWALD

It was truly the sound of beautiful music filling the air for four days this past week at Strauss Playhouse as Executive Director Lonny Fraze, Eloy Fominaya and Velma Willey auditioned nearly 200 children and adults for the parts in our next Little Theater musical, the Rodgers and Hammerstein hit, "Sound of Music."

More than one observer said in awe, "Why, it looks like a performance!" as he gazed at the house literally full of eager voices and fascinated on-lookers. Velma sat at the piano on stage playing for an endless stream of glorious voices while Harriet Adams held forth on the upright in the lobby, giving the auditioners a chance to practice a bit before going on stage.

MANY REFRAINS

While all this really good singing was going on, the few who knew their limitations in that department, but couldn't resist the temptation, had their own fun with improvised duets and trios, ringing the rafters and searing a few eardrums with hearty and completely heartless refrains of "The hills fill my heart with the sound of music. . ." and "I am sixteen, going on seventeen . . ."

Meanwhile, back in the Green Room, Lonny made valiant attempts to hear each one read a few lines of dialogue since even in a musical, there are spoken lines that must be read with clarity and feeling. "Sound of Music" calls for a few non-singing roles, too, and these had to be cast.

A director is always grateful for an abundance of talent to select from, and that Lonny had this time, that he had. In fact, it will make casting a king-sized job. At press time, there weren't any definite decisions, but we should have some news in that line to report in next week's column.

CLEANUP

Our backstage area had become uncomfortably cluttered this fall so a cleanup crew was organized last week to clear it out. George Hargus, Bobby Taylor, Bob Evans Jr., Tom Ernst, Lonny and Chris West worked several days after "Greensleeves' Magic" closed getting it in order for the tremendous amount of work that will go into "Sound of Music." It's so clean and neat that it hardly looks like the same place!

As always, our wardrobe department is grateful for anything we can use in future plays. Libby and Andy Anders gave us a fine Air Force uniform last week that will probably see good use before very long.

An interesting bit of information came our way recently. We learned that the Von Trapp family, about whom "Sound of Music" is written, are residents of the United States now, and own a ski resort in New Hampshire. The mountain area there is probably very much like their native Austria.

AT TRYOUTS

Because of space limitations, we won't be able to list all the names of those who came to tryouts last week, but we'll complete the listing next week. Among those who either sang or read were: Debbie Jones, Cathy Graser, Carol Sheffield, Sarah Madison, Cheryl Fontana, Lyn Funderburk, Linda Chappell, Patty Shoudy, Rande Herrell, Kathy Griffin, Nancy Govang, Martha Maxwell, Mary Ann Moore, Lynnette Cage, Cathy Solomon, Terry Ann Brown, Theresa Clark, Pamela True Cannon, Janet Harvey, Cathy La Pietra, Maureen McCarty, Courtney Swayze, Mandy Giffin, Cindy Easterling.

Ashley Easterling, Kathy Jones, Becky Willey, Debbie Sheffield, Sue Burkhalter, Susan Golson, Nellie Neal, Ginger Van Veckhoven, Rebo King, Judy Slaughter, Diane Griffin, Susan Odom, Bonnie Weeks, Sherry Harris, Desha Swayze, Lila Loftin, Ginny Nichols, Sunny Meriwether, Ann Rawson, Elise Trimble, Susan Harrison, Betsy Taylor, Susan Stone, Paulette Butler, Judy Varnado, Kathy Lawn, Charles Sampognaro, Tommy Humphries, Gordon G. Grant III, Craig Seligman, Allen Turpin, Buddy Terzia, Pat Ellington, Judy Swayze, Kay Purett, Renee Portier, Suzanne Keller.

Debbie Swartz, Susan Ellington, Ronnie Cohen, Kay Seligman, Harriet Adams, Anne Hodge, Mary Kay Bannister, Sandy Williams, Terri Gregory, Diane Biegenwald, Cindy Easterling, Sandy Jelks, Jan Carter, Karen Galligan, Vickie Crow, Bethia Brown, Barbara Sheppard, Mary Margaret Marsala, Aletha Crumpton, Suzanne Patterson, Suzie Inzina, Gary Fontana, Layne Gandy, Lynne Collins, Bobbie Gregory, Debra Cumpton, Jeannie Taylor, Doris Youngblood, Rick Taylor, Jerry Hammons, Margaret Doyle, Nancy Newcombe, Johnnie Files, James Doyle and Sally Milstead.

"Sound of Music" will open Feb. 19 and run straight through Feb. 28. The only matinee will be on Sunday, Feb. 21 and there will be no evening performance that day.

THREE IN ONE

NEW YORK (AP) — Sheldon Harnick and Jerry Bock, who wrote the score for "Fiddler on the Roof," are planning a program of three short musical plays as their next Broadway exhibit.

"Too many musicals run out of steam by the time the second-act curtain goes up," says Stuart Ostrow, who will produce the bill. "By using the shorter form, Harnick and Bock are able to use dramatic situations previously not considered practical."

A single cast is to perform the separate pieces.

STAMPS

First Stamp Issues From New Nation

The new Republic of Zambia, formerly Northern Rhodesia, which just issued its first set of stamps honoring its independence, has now issued an initial definitive set of stamps.

There are 14 stamps from the land which prides itself on being the home of Victoria Falls. Depicted on the new adhesives are: a farmer with a grain marketing board silo, a radiographer at work, a native dancer, the cotton industry, dairy and beef stock, communications, the lumber industry, fishing industry, tobacco industry, basket weaving, hunting in the Lungway Valley, education, copper mining, Makishi dancing.

set of two stamps featured Ntem Falls on a 20 franc and a beach with coconut trees on a 50 franc. A folklore set depicts a dance mask on an 18 franc, a dancing costume on a 9 franc and a Foulbe rider on a 25 franc stamp.

Iran has announced the issuance of a set of three new stamps to honor Children's Day in that country. A portrait of the Crown Prince of Iran appears on the 1 rials, 2 r and 6 r stamps.

Darkroom Feature Sheds More Light

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

I've been snooping around darkrooms lately and found someone has thrown a lot of light on the subject. That someone may be Fred Thomas because he discovered a super-duper type of safelight in France and recently introduced it to America.

Can you imagine walking into a working darkroom without having to become "dark adjusted?" That's what you get with the new Duplex Super - Safelight. It's a ceiling fixture flooding everything with a diffused "bounce - light." After a five - minute warming up period, visibility is so high it seems wrong to open a box of sensitized paper. But Bernard Hoffman, who runs a well known photo lab in Manhattan, assures that it is quite safe. He suggests it be installed on the opposite side from an enlarger so that the body of the person at the enlarger casts a shadow on the easel. It'll make for easier focusing, especially with a dense negative.

NEW APPROACH

The difference is in a radically new approach to lighting. Instead of a tungsten lamp, the Duplex Super uses a sodium vapor lamp. When electricity flows through it, a special monochromatic light is emitted. It forms a very narrow band on the visible spectrum known as the "sodium band." By a fortunate coincidence, this monochromatic light is sensitive to the human eye and least sensitive to photographic papers.

One of the light's characteristics is that you can't distinguish colors under it. Everything is black and white with a yellowish tinge. But it is pleasant to work under, objects are easier to handle and to find, the quality of prints is easier to judge and there are likely to be less accidents in the darkroom.

Oh, yes, before you rush out to try and buy a Duplex Super-Safelight, the cost may discourage you. At $125 per outfit, it will interest commercial photo labs, hospital X - ray darkrooms, camera clubs or wealthy photographers. However, Fred Thomas is hopeful that a less expensive model will be designed in the near future to fit the amateur photographer's pocketbook and darkroom.

ANOTHER IMPORT

Another of his imports from France is the "Scoponet." This is an optical device for precise focusing of the enlarger image. Though it looks at first glance like an inexpensive microscope, it actually is a fine, aligned optical instrument which gives a 20 - time magnification of the image coming through the enlarger lens. This can be so critical that you find you are focusing on the grain of the negative and there is only one precise point where it is sharp. With the Scoponet you can see when you've found that point.

The device has an optical eye - piece which is adjusted to an individual's eyes. In use, an enlargement is first sized, cropped and visually focused for sharpness on the enlarging paper. Then the Scoponet is placed somewhere near the center of the picture area or moved around the precise adjustment with the eye watching through the eye - piece and a hand turning the enlarger knob slowly.

LENS CHECK

Since the device checks the image coming through the enlarger lens, it is an excellent way to check enlarging lenses. It reveals the optimum point for sharpness. Many lenses are sharpest at f - 6.3; some tend to unsharpness at f-11 or f -16.

The Scoponet will be frustrating to use with an enlarger whose focusing controls are loose, if the negative carrier isn't aligned properly or if the enlarger isn't rock steady. As a precise tool, it should be used with good equipment to make quality enlargements otherwise its cost ($22.50) will not be justified.

A YEAR TO REMEMBER— A BOOK TO TREASURE!

THE WORLD IN 1964

When the world's foremost news gathering agency, The Associated Press, in cooperation with this and other member newspapers, decided to publish a memorable book of the year, it wanted to put out more than just another news annual or almanac.

So it assigned to the task the team of outstanding writers that made an all time best seller of The Torch Is Passed, the story of the Kennedy tragedy.

The results were foreseeable — a volume that captures the excitement and immediacy of a great news year and that relates it to the American newspaper reader. It's a sure bet as a collector's item—something you won't want to miss—and as a solid reference book for student or general reader.

First-Rate Spy Story Described

FUNERAL IN BERLIN. By Len Deighton. Putnam. $4.95.

Espionage and counter-espionage, with Berlin as the focal point. A supposed "deal" to transport a Soviet scientist to England, by smuggling him through a Berlin checkpoint in a coffin.

That is the framework for Deighton's novel, narrated by a British secret agent whose real name never is mentioned.

Two of the characters are quite tricky people.

Johnnie Vulkan, a spy of obscure origins who is in the pay of the British, has given them reasons to wonder whether he can be trusted.

So Vulkan and Stok have arranged the smuggling of the top Russian biologist, Semitsa — or have they? Is this a real deal? And why is there a request to the British for fake documents in the name of Louis Paul Broum, who had been a pretty mysterious individual himself?

There are some complications in the way of sex, meaning Samantha Steel. And why is she in league with Vulkan? Or is she?

One of the techniques in writing an espionage story is to have the characters make enigmatic moves and say cryptic things, which sooner or later make a reasonable amount of sense. Deighton pushes this technique to its height, so the reader has to remain alert as he follows the action.

This may not be quite on a level with Le Carre's best, "The Spy Who Came In From The Cold," but it is first-rate, and better than Deighton's first one, "The Ipcress File." He gives quite a polish to this genre.

Napoleon's Big Defeat At Waterloo

The Hundred Days, by Edith Saunders (Norton, $6): On a summer day in 1815, two armies faced other across rolling farmlands outside the Belgian village of Waterloo. To the north was the polyglot army of the Duke of Wellington, only about half of its ranks English; the rest largely untrained Dutch, Belgian and German troops. As the Duke inspected his men, some of his German soldiers became so nervous that they fired at him. How could he win a battle with men like these, he asked his aides. Ready to attack was the French and Napoleon, newly escaped from Elba, eager to restore his lost place as conqueror of Europe, and so confident that he had already ordered his dinner for the evening in Brussels, far behind the English lines. In this baggage were the handbills he was to distribute to the liberated Belgians, already signed and dated. If Wellington was less sanguine, he was better organized.

Length Hinders Effect

HURRY SUNDOWN. By K. B. Gilden. Doubleday.

The place and time: a county seat town on a river delta in Georgia, in the year after World War II.

The medium: a very, very long novel (1,046 pages).

The key to the plot is an old plantation that has been bought up — with some skullduggery involved — and sold to an insurance company backed by high-flying Northern financiers. It has been merchanized and converted into a vegetable factory.

Two of the major characters are Julie-Ann, descendant of the aristocratic plantation family, and her ambitious, scoundrel husband Henry Warren, manager of the merchanized farm. It happens that their faltering union has produced a child, Coley, of flawed mind.

For the racial contrast, the other two major characters are two returning war veterans, Rad McDowell and a Negro, Reeve Scott. Their two scraggly, adjoining patches of earth are blocking the path of an expansion for the vegetable farm and factory freezing plant.

There is an interplay of politics and religion. The local banker, political leader and churchman, Benson Reece, is fighting Judge Purcell, a socialy ambitious old mossback who ties himself to a political demagogue. Right in the middle is a confused, would-be liberal minister, Clem De Lavery, whose personal life is a whole psychological novel in itself.

There are many characters, including two physicians, one of whom is a quack who tries to treat the Warrens child; a Negro teacher and his Northern-educated daughter, who attracts Scott; and assorted often engagingly eccentric, minor characters.

Bert Gilden and his wife Katya have written a first novel that is much too wordy and sprawling; their effects could have been achieved better without all the distracting descriptions, side issues and digressions, no matter how perceptively they have been written. It takes a patient reader to feel the throb of compassionate understanding they have attempted to evoke.

Your own reaction to the story may depend upon your temperament. You may be swamped by the sheer weight of this sea of words. Or you may feel that it is a stirring document.

This Book Interesting For Some

ONLY YOU, DICK DARING, by Merle Miller and Evan Rhodes (William Sloane Associates, $5.95): If two heads are better than one, then seven or a dozen are even better than two. That is the reasoning of the television executives in this chronicle of the life and death of a script, told by the men who tried to give it birth. Merle Miller, the executives knew, was a novelist and script writer of some talent. That is why they chose him to do the pilot film script for a proposed series starring Jackie Cooper. The idea was a good one, they all agreed, one that would give television a chance to do the public service series it really wants to do. It told of a county agricultural agent and his role in helping farmers — a sort of domestic peace corpsman. Then the minor changes began. Everyone had suggestions, and slowly the script started to lose its public service shine and become transformed into another cowboy or doctors show in a different setting. In a dizzying series of jet flights across the continent, 19 complete rewrites, and Florentine intrigues, Miller loses control of the script; the directors and salesmen take over, and the series flops. What remains is this book, which might someday be read alongside Machivelli's "The Prince."

Light Novel Is Amusing

NINA UPSTAIRS. By Beverley Gasner. Knopf. $3.95.

Nina, the heroine of this comedy of the working girl in the big city, happens to be the type who always has to be in love with someone.

But that doesn't mean she's a sentimental, soap opera, clinging vine creature. On the contrary, she has a vinegarish sense of humor, is fast on the uptake and makes easily with the smart remark.

She slaves over a hot typewriter in the advertising department of a huge Manhattan store, where the underpaid help cringe under the whip of the lady Dracula who runs the department.

Nina has a firend, Diane, who is a real bubble-head with a yen to paint. Together they spend a vacation in a house full of wacky characters on the far tip of Long Island.

Most of the comedy develops around the store and the vacation, but Nina gets into more serious moods in the matter of romance. Having just broken her engagement to a young but very studded shirt, she meets Julien, the store's new furniture buyer. Julien very definitely is the Older Man, and very cagey about making any concessions to the June - moon - croon atmosphere.

It's a light, amusing novel.

WITH STORY ON MURDER

Old Judge's Story

A COVENANT WITH DEATH. By Stephen Becker. Atheneum. $4.50.

The first degree murder trial of Bryan Talbot, charged with strangling his wife Louise, took place in the summer of 1923 in a little Southwest town of 4,000 population, Soledad City.

There was circumstantial evidence against Talbot, an ambitious but somewhat erratic young business man, but there were no witnesses. The trial uncovered a scandal about the flirtatious 27-year-old Louise and her husband.

The story, as unfolded in this novel, is told by Ben Lewis, known now as the Old Judge, but at the time of the trial as Young Judge Lewis, for he was only 29 that summer.

There were two judges in Soledad City, and Lewis' colleague Alvin Hochstader presided at the murder trial. Then when the case reached a bizarre ending — it wouldn't be fair to give away the plot — Lewis was drawn into the center of everything.

So mainly this is a story of a courtroom struggle, the reactions of the principals, the witnesses and the townspeople. In a way, the culmination of the plot makes this resemble a mystery novel, but not in the usual sense of tracking down a hidden villain. As a trial story, it is in the same field as "Anatomy of a Murder."

But this book also is the story of Lewis himself, of the Old Judge reconstructing what he had been like as the Young Judge, and characterizing himself as passing "the crisis of adolescence" at the age of 29. In retrospect, he reaches the disillusioned conclusion that few members of the human race ever get out of their adolescence.

A colorful and vividly written tale, it has many facets to engage the reader.

Book Claims Frontiersmen Special Breed

The Final Challenge, by Dale Van Every (William Morrow, $6): The frontiersmen were a special breed. They had pushed over the mountains into Kentucky and Tennessee at the time of the Revolution, hacked out farms and settled down. Now it was 1804 and new frontiers were beckoning in the vastness of the Missouri Valley, joined to the United States by the Louisiana Purchase. The frontiersmen did not hesitate to push on, even Daniel Boone, then 65 years old and with 33 years of hard frontier life behind him. They trapped, hunted, farmed, fought, and extended the nation. This book, the fourth in a series on the frontier, covers the period from 1804 to 1845.

U.S. Policy Haunted Today By Issues From Suez Canal

By WILLIAM RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

U.S. Policy is haunted today by issues which are direct results of bungling, cynicism, naivete and double-dealing in a crisis that almost brought World War III, says a Canadian authority who reports his findings authenticated by world leaders.

These findings are reported in "Crisis — The Inside Story of the Suez Conspiracy" by Terrence Robertson, a Canadian who presents documentation indicting American, British and French leaders of eight years ago for an incredible chapter in world diplomacy. The book, first published in Canada, is issued in the United States by Atheneum.

THE POLICIES

Because of the policies of the then secretary of state, the late John Foster Dulles, the British prime minister of the period, Anthony Eden, and the then-premier of France, Guy Mollet, Robertson claims:—

1. The United Nations is faced with a crisis now over Soviet refusal to pay its part of the assessment for a U.N. police force in the Middle East, the first such force in the U.N.'s history.

2. The Hungarians lost their breath of freedom from Soviet domination because the Soviet military, in view of the Suez crisis, persuaded the Kremlin the revolt had to be exterminated by force.

3. Only President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic is the winner. He seized and held the Suez Canal. He launched his High Aswan Dam project without Western aid, financed by the Russians. He kept his position as an influential Arab leader.

4. "Political relations between Britain, France and the United States have been strained ever since Suez. In 1962, the Kennedy administration risked war by imposing the Cuban blockade without prior consultation with the allies. Six months later Gen. Charles de Gaulle vetoed British membership in the Common Market. Britain and France each decided they could not rely on the American nuclear umbrella and set about the serious business of becoming independent nuclear powers. Each of these events can be traced directly back to distrust and disillusionment in the aftermath of Suez."

CLOSE TO WAR

Robertson writes that the world was close to war in the tense weeks of late 1956 when two deep crises — Suez and the Soviet extermination of the Hungarian revolt — were played out simultaneously on the U.N. stage.

The Suez crisis arose in mid-1956 after Soviet intrusion in the Middle East and with Britain's final evacuation from her former Canal Zone base.

Nasser, haunted by Arab disgrace in Palestine and recently humbled by a massive Israeli retaliation attack in the Gaza Strip, was hungry for arms. The Russians responded. The West learned with shock he had contracted for $450 million worth and Syria for $100 million worth of Communist arms.

Anthony Eden, newly successor to Winston Churchill as Britain's prime minister, viewed Nasser as a new Hitler who had to be toppled. France's government saw him as a dangerous enemy because of his interference in the Algerian revolt. Israel professed the new arms spelled attack on her.

Nasser was dickering for backing for a prestige program — the High Aswan Dam. Now the Russians approached with an offer to finance the whole $1.3-billion scheme on the basis of a 60-year loan. Nasser had not slammed the door to the West, and had indicated willingness to accept World Bank conditions for a loan, knowing he could seize the canal if he was rejected.

But Dulles was angry, says Robertson, and did not believe Moscow had the resources. He regarded the Soviet bid as a sham which could be exposed dramatically. So Dulles publicly announced that a loan to Nasser was not feasible because Egypt's resources could not insure success.

THROUGHOUT

Robertson says this public humiliation was calculated. Stung, Nasser seized the canal at gunpoint. The Suez crisis was in full bloom.

Robertson says that throughout the Suez crisis President Dwight D. Eisenhower, then seeking reelection on a peace platform, "was much in the dark about what Dulles was doing."

After seizure of the canal, Eisenhower announced he could not support the use of force in Egypt. Dulles, however, said in London force might be permissible if other avenues of settlement were exhausted. Then later, writes Robertson, Dulles said in Washington force would be impermissible in any circumstances. The effect seemed to be to bolster Nasser's confidence.

Robertson says Dulles was "so absorbed by his enemies that he had no time to beware of his friends."

Probably, says the author, Dulles was unaware of a British-French-Israeli plot to unseat Nasser. The plan, he says, was for Israel to mobilize, attack late in October across the Sinai Desert, make the canal a no-man's land between opposing armies and thus offer a pretext for British-French intervention to keep vital Suez Canal traffic flowing.

Germany, Israeli Relations Critical

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Animosity between Israel and the Arab nations is mixed with strong feelings about Germany in the Middle East today. To get to the bottom of this situation an AP reporter stationed in Germany visited both Egypt and Israel.)

By CARL BUCHALLA

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (AP) — West Germany's relations with Israel once gave hope that bitter wounds left by Nazism could be healed. Today, however, the two countries seem farther apart than they have been for years.

Many Jews who thought West Germany was no longer the Germany of Hitler now regard Bonn as untrustworthy. Bonn is the only Western nation which has no fullfledged diplomatic relations with Jerusalem. German scientists are working in Egypt on rocket and airplane buildings. West Germany so far has not prolonged the 20-year limit on bringing Nazi war criminals to trial.

RESTITUTION

"The Germans paid us 3.5 billion marks — $875 million — restitution for Nazi crimes, but that only was to rehabilitate themselves before the world. Now thy are showing their true face" — this is an opinion heard in Israel.

It is not necessarily the opinion of the Israeli government. Official spokesmen are careful to stress:

"We see the situation from a politically real standpoint without emotion, although that would be understandable. We do not see Hitler Germany in the Germany of Adenauer and Erhard. But we feel that Bonn must show its good intentions by freeing itself from the blackmail of the Arabs. A clear position must be taken by Bonn toward Israel."

The Israelis demand that, at the last, Bonn exchange ambassadors with Jerusalem and Normalize relations.

"It must be expected that West Germany behaves as a responsible world power," said one Israeli official. "Otherwise, how can we avoid the impression that Germany has gone back to its old ways, that it tolerates the use of its skilled manpower in Arab armament industry and that it is willing to see Nazi war criminals go scot-free after 20 years?"

This is not an easy problem for Bonn to solve.

Bonn has expressed a moral and historical obligation toward the Jews, after the murders and persecutions of the Hitler era. On the other hand, Cairo threatens that it will take up diplomatic relations with Communist East Germany if Bonn does the same to Israel.

Businessmen Praise LBJ's Message

NEW YORK (AP) — Businessmen generally expressed approval during the week of President Johnson's State of the Union message.

The stock market advanced sharply as investors saw bullish in the President's ideas to bolster the economy.

Urging Congress to adopt a standby emergency program to prevent recessions, Johnson asked the legislators to make it possible that income taxes can be reduced promptly and to vote public works funds that the government can spend if recession threatens.

"The President deserves the strongest praise for the breadth and optimism of his State of the Union message," said Donald C. Lower, chairman of General Telephon & Telgraph Co. "His message was an inspiring challenge and demonstrated his great confidence in the future."

Bruce Gimbel, president of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., New York-based department store chain, commented that Johnson's statement reinforced the general view that he will do all in his power to achieve a prosperous population and a sound education program.

Particularly gratifying, said J. Gordon Dakins, executive vice president of the Nation Retail Merchant's Association, was the President's expressed desire to maintain a strong economy and cut excise taxes.

"I thought it was an inspiring speech," said Ralph Lazarus, president of Federated Department Stores. "It was both realistic and imaginative."

James W. Davant, managing partner of the Wall Street brokerage firm, Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, commented that, "President Johnson has sketched out a very comprehensive, ambitious and constructive program."

Critics mostly said that they considered Johnson's statements vague and would await future messages to Congress before reaching a conclusion.

Potential New Oil Field Find Is Being Tested

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Production tests were underway at a potential new oil field find in Wilkinson County with ADCO Producing Co. preparing to perforate its wildcat, the U.S.A. No. 1, sec. 3-3n-1e, north of the Cypress Branch Field.

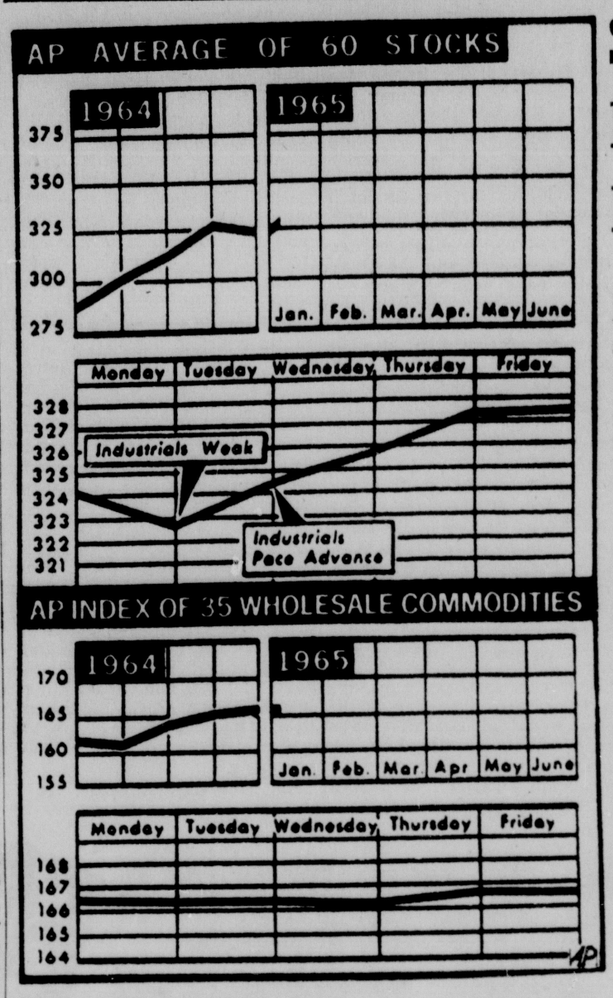

The venture was drilled to 7,410 feet with oil shows logged in the Wilcox zone at 7,006-18 feet.

Phillips Petroleum Co. resumed drilling below 14,000 feet in its Perry County wildcat, the Josephine No. 1, sec. 35-1s-10w, after testing 980,000 cubic feet of gas per day on open hole drill stem test.

The venture claimed considerable attention when it attempted to blow out while drilling was in progress below 13,900 feet. Operators set a protection string of casing to 13,858 feet and tested the gas zone. The well is northeast of Wiggins and is scheduled to be drilled to 20,500 feet. If contract depth is reached it will set a new depth record for the state.

In Adams County, a new Wilcox Oil Field discovery appears assured at Hooper, Dehan and Reynolds' wildcat, the Junkin No. 1, sec. 58-8n-2w, north of Natchez. Operators are testing a perforated zone at 4,326-27 feet with the well flowing 80 barrels of oil per day.

Two important wildcat wells are drilling in Smith County. Pan Am and Larue-Smith Production Co. are below 11,460 feet in their Williamson No. 1, sec. 23-4n-9e, and Pan Am is below 13,280 feet in its Sorey No. 1, sec. 27-4n-8e.

THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks finished higher closing Friday at 327.4 from 324.1 a week earlier. Led by textiles the commodity index advanced to 166.6 from 166.4. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Stocks Post Best Gains In 7 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week, aided materially by President Johnson's State of the Union message, put on its best rally in seven weeks.

Not since the week ended Nov. 21, when the market went to historic peaks before retreating in concern over rising interest rates, had the list put on such a powerful performance.

The Dow Jones industrial average advanced 8.47 to 882.60.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks last week made a net gain of 3.3 at 327.4. This was its biggest rise since the week ended Nov. 21 when it rose 4.5.

Volume in the week was 23,334,940 shares compared with 20,560,810 for the four-day trading week previous, shortened by the New Year holiday.

The gains in the averages were born out by other statistics. Of 1,541 issues traded, gainers outnumbered losers by the wide margin of 979 to 417.

Part of the reason for the market's strength, according to Wall Street sources, was the desire of big institutional investors such as mutual and pension funds and insurance companies to reinvest idle cash resulting from profit taking and tax-loss selling in the dying stages of the 1964 market.

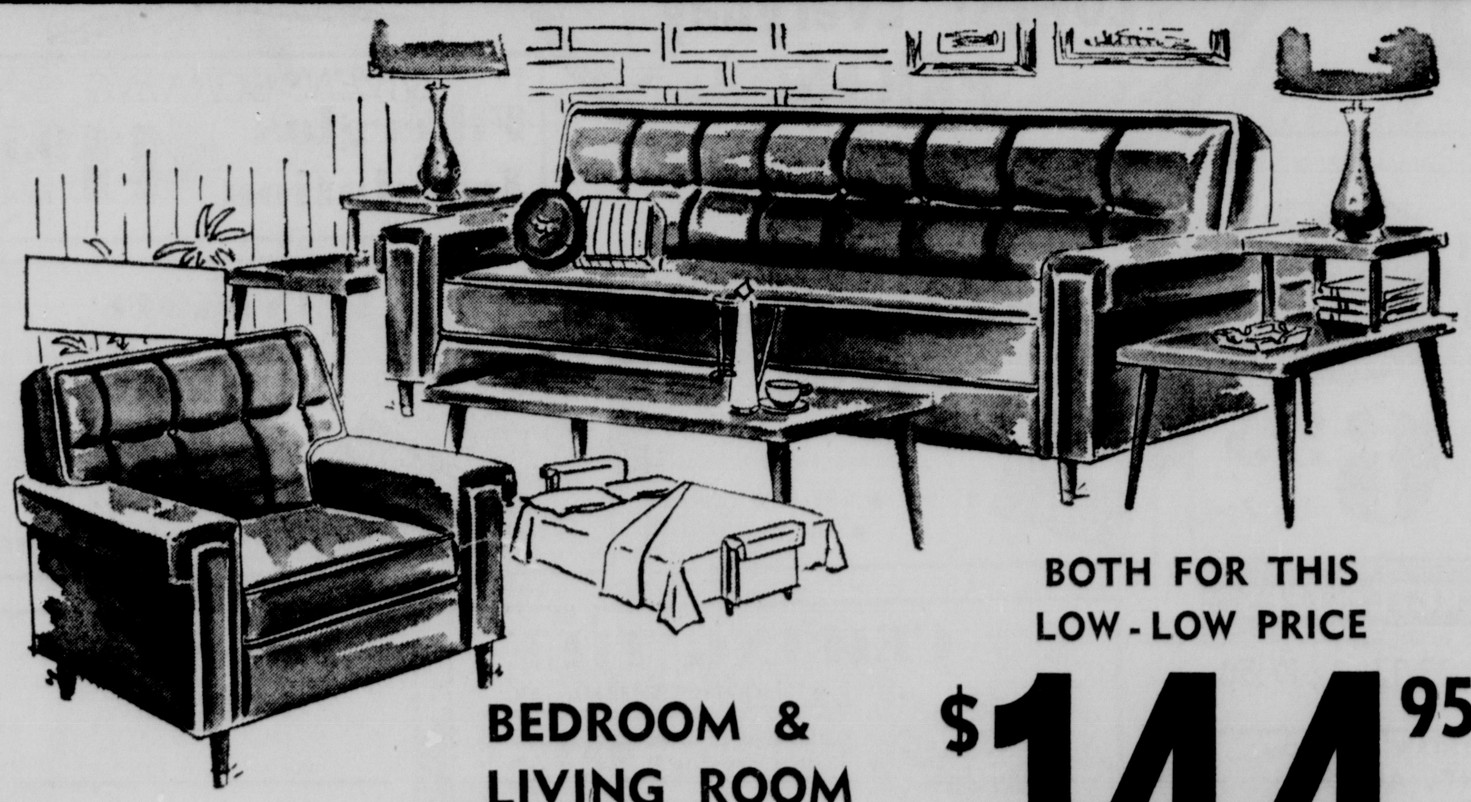

Shares of gold and silver mining companies—as well as smaller oil companies thought of as possibilities for takeover by larger ones—were prominent in the market.

Bond markets welcomed the New Year last week with a flurry of trading and advancing prices. Treasury bond prices were up through most of the list.

On the New York Stock Exchange corporate bond volume for the week totaled a par value of $42,498 million, compared to a much smaller turnover a week ago, when trading was reduced because of the New Year's holiday.

OIL, GAS REPORT

Production Gains In Monroe Area

The new year brought a spark to activity in the Monroe Oil and Gas District, according to the weekly report released by Duncan Cook, director of the local office of the State Conservation Department.

Upsurge in field activity came with mild and clear weather, following the rainy conditions of December which slowed down production.

Four wells were completed and 13 permits applied for during the week ending Jan. 7. A total of 17 wells were active.

Two completions were in LaSalle Parish — Tullos Urania Field, Wayne J. Spears' Urania Lumber Company K-1, 20 BOPD and Nebo Hemphill Field, J. Mears Oil Company's Ut 2, 56 BOPD. The others were in Ouachita Parish's Cheniere Field, Pan American Petroleum Company's Chenierville SU "Y", Nelson Est., Gas District, MCF 220 BBls and Winn Parish's Tullos Urania Field, Yazoo Operations' Harper "A", 20 BOPD.

There were three new locations each in Catahoula and Concordia Parishes, two in Tensas and one each in Avoyelles, LaSalle, Ouachita, Union and Winn Parishes.

Two wells were re-completed — Ouachita Parish, Monroe Gas Field, Public Petroleum Corporation's Potts No. 1, re-completed 354 MCF gas, RP: 200 pounds P. 2260½-65½, Harrell Sand (formerly Gas Rock well), 2518 feet; and Tensas Parish, Buckhorn Field, Monsanto Company's Mass SU 5, Fisher, re-completed with 144 BOPD, 150 MCF gas, GOR: 1040-1-BS&W, 8900 feet.

In a look at the overall situation, there were 41 locations, 17 active, 82 inactive, four completions, five abandoned, two re-completed, 13 new locations, and eight expired.

Businessmen Praise LBJ's Message

NEW YORK (AP) — Businessmen generally expressed approval during the week of President Johnson's State of the Union message.

The stock market advanced sharply as investors saw bullish in the President's ideas to bolster the economy.

Urging Congress to adopt a standby emergency program to prevent recessions, Johnson asked the legislators to make it possible that income taxes can be reduced promptly and to vote public works funds that the government can spend if recession threatens.

However, he predicted "what every economic sign now tells us — the continued flourishing of the American economy."

"The President deserves the strongest praise for the breadth and optimism of his State of the Union message," said Donald C. Lower, chairman of General Telephon & Telgraph Co. "His message was an inspiring challenge and demonstrated his great confidence in the future."

Bruce Gimbel, president of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., New York-based department store chain, commented that Johnson's statement reinforced the general view that he will do all in his power to achieve a prosperous population and a sound education program.

Particularly gratifying, said J. Gordon Dakins, executive vice president of the Nation Retail Merchant's Association, was the President's expressed desire to maintain a strong economy and cut excise taxes.

"I thought it was an inspiring speech," said Ralph Lazarus, president of Federated Department Stores. "It was both realistic and imaginative."

James W. Davant, managing partner of the Wall Street brokerage firm, Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, commented that, "President Johnson has sketched out a very comprehensive, ambitious and constructive program."

Critics mostly said that they considered Johnson's statements vague and would await future messages to Congress before reaching a conclusion.

Potential New Oil Field Find Is Being Tested

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Production tests were underway at a potential new oil field find in Wilkinson County with ADCO Producing Co. preparing to perforate its wildcat, the U.S.A. No. 1, sec. 3-3n-1e, north of the Cypress Branch Field.

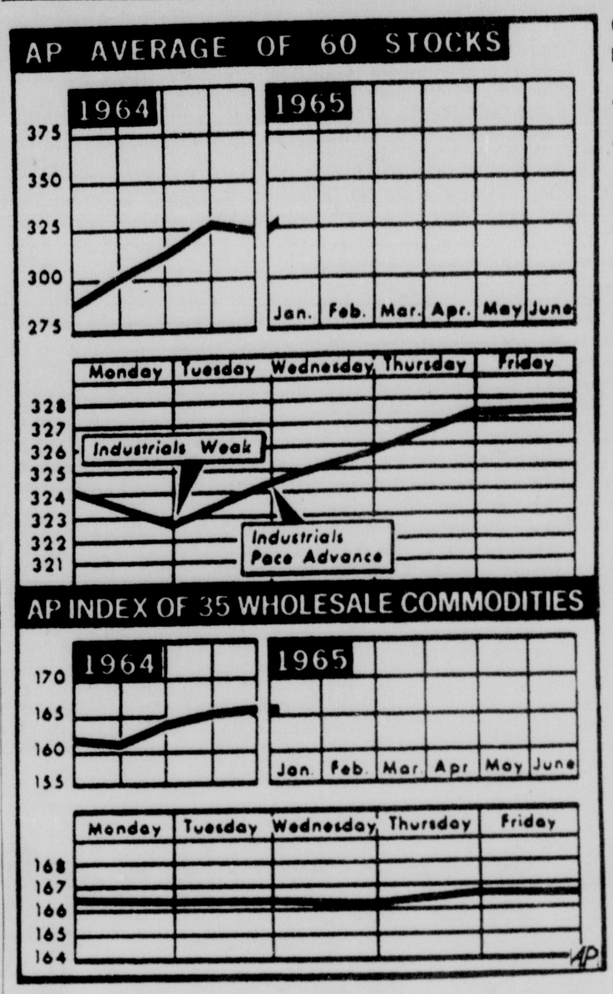

The venture was drilled to 7,-410 feet with oil shows logged in the Wilcox zone at 7,006-18 feet.

Phillips Petroleum Co. resumed drilling below 14,000 feet in its Perry County wildcat, the Josephine No. 1, sec. 35-1s-10w, after testing 980,000 cubic feet of gas per day on open hole drill stem test.

The venture claimed considerable attention when it attempted to blow out while drilling was in progress below 13,-900 feet. Operators set a protection string of casing to 13,858 feet and tested the gas zone. The well is northeast of Wiggins and is scheduled to be drilled to 20,500 feet. If contract depth is reached it will set a new depth record for the state.

In Adams County, a new Wilcox Oil Field discovery appears assured at Hooper, Dehan and Reynolds' wildcat, the Junkin No. 1, sec. 58-8n-2w, north of Natchez. Operators are testing a perforated zone at 4,326-27 feet with the well flowing 80 barrels of oil per day.

Two important wildcat wells are drilling in Smith County. Pan Am and Larue-Smith Production Co. are below 11,460 feet in their Williamson No. 1, sec. 23-4n-9e, and Pan Am is below 13,280 feet in its Sorey No. 1, sec. 27-4n-8e.

THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks finished higher closing Friday at 327.4 from 324.1 a week earlier. Led by textiles the commodity index advanced to 166.6 from 166.4. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Stocks Post Best Gains In 7 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week, aided materially by President Johnson's State of the Union message, put on its best rally in seven weeks.

Not since the week ended Nov. 21, when the market went to historic peaks before retreating in concern over rising interest rates, had the list put on such a powerful performance.

The Dow Jones industrial average advanced 8.47 to 882.60.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks last week made a net gain of 3.3 at 327.4. This was its biggest rise since the week ended Nov. 21 when it rose 4.5.

Volume in the week was 23,-334,940 shares compared with 20,560,810 for the four-day trading week previous, shortened by the New Year holiday.

The gains in the averages were born out by other statistics. Of 1,541 issues traded, gainers outnumbered losers by the wide margin of 979 to 417.

Part of the reason for the market's strength, according to Wall Street sources, was the desire of big institutional investors such as mutual and pension funds and insurance companies to reinvest idle cash resulting from profit taking and tax-loss selling in the dying stages of the 1964 market.

Shares of gold and silver mining companies—as well as smaller oil companies thought of as possibilities for takeover by larger ones—were prominent in the market.

Bond markets welcomed the New Year last week with a flurry of trading and advancing prices. Treasury bond prices were up through most of the list.

On the New York Stock Exchange corporate bond volume for the week totaled a par value of $42,498 million, compared to a much smaller turnover a week ago, when trading was reduced because of the New Year's holiday.

OIL, GAS REPORT

Production Gains In Monroe Area

The new year brought a spark to activity in the Monroe Oil and Gas District, according to the weekly report released by Duncan Cook, director of the local office of the State Conservation Department.

Upsurge in field activity came with mild and clear weather, following the rainy conditions of December which slowed down production.

Four wells were completed and 13 permits applied for during the week ending Jan. 7. A total of 17 wells were active.

Two completions were in LaSalle Parish — Tullos Urania Field, Wayne J. Spears' Urania Lumber Company K-1, 20 BOPD and Nebo Hemphill Field, J. Mears Oil Company's Ut 2, 56 BOPD. The others were in Ouachita Parish's Cheniere Field, Pan American Petroleum Company's Chenierville SU "Y", Nelson Est., Gas District, MCF 220 BBls and Winn Parish's Tullos Urania Field, Yazoo Operations' Harper "A", 20 BOPD.

There were three new locations each in Catahoula and Concordia Parishes, two in Tensas and one each in Avoyelles, LaSalle, Ouachita, Union and Winn Parishes.

Two wells were re-completed — Ouachita Parish, Monroe Gas Field, Public Petroleum Corporation's Potts No. 1, re-completed 354 MCF gas, RP: 200 pounds P. 2260½-65½, Harrell Sand (formerly Gas Rock well), 2518 feet; and Tensas Parish, Buckhorn Field, Monsanto Company's Mass SU 5, Fisher, re-completed with 144 BOPD, 150 MCF gas, GOR: 1040-1-BS&W, 8900 feet.

In a look at the overall situation, there were 41 locations, 17 active, 82 inactive, four completions, five abandoned, two re-completed, 13 new locations, and eight expired.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

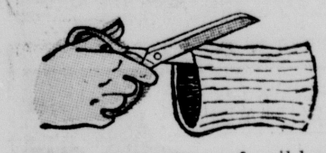

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My teen-age daughter always had a batch of bobby socks that had lost the elasticity in the tops.

I cut off the tops where the wide ridges end and discard the foot part. This leaves me with a ribbed tube.

I take a pair of scissors and slit the tube between two ribs, and this leaves me with a square of ribbed cloth.

I crochet around the edge of this ribbed cloth with leftover crochet cotton, finishing it with a loop on one corner — thereby making a lovely dishcloth! The colored edge gives an added zip.

Love you,
Edna Fitzhugh

Oh . . .Edna!

Now just who loves whom? What wonderful dishcloths these make . . .

I am not one who crochets so I took my scissors and just whacked the ribbed parts! (One could use pinking shears) . . . And, my, does it scrub!

Another thing I learned was to save the foot part (they are usually discolored) for applying wax to floors, polishing the car, etc.

I never waste anything.

Love you, too,
Heloise

QUIET PLEASE!

DEAR HELOISE:

To stop the rattle of wooden windows, drive one or more small brass-headed tacks in the framework. The curved heads of the tacks will allow the window to move over them easily and will take up the slack. They are always in place.

Betty Jo Roberts

BISCUITS AND BOBBINS

DEAR HELOISE:

For readers who have babies and use the teething biscuits that come in separate plastic envelopes . . .

These envelopes can be used for storing your bobbins and small spools of thread. Your sewing box will be neat, the thread will remain untangled, and the colors can be seen plainly through the clear plastic.

Mrs. H. W. Webb

QUICK AND DRY

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a quick trick for collectors and homemakers.

For those cruets, salt and pepper shakers, and small-necked bottles and vases which take forever to dry inside—use your hair dryer.

Remove the cap from the hose and with the dryer turned on to the desired heat, hold the blower end of the hose in, or directly over the neck of the article to be dried. Cuts drying time to a minimum and prevents condensation, especially in decanters with stoppers or tops!

Minnie Barlow

DON'T CHIP IT

DEAR HELOISE:

Paper napkins placed on each dinner plate before returning it to the cupboard help prevent scratching and chipping when they are stacked.

Then when setting the table for the next meal, the napkins to go with each plate are handy, thus saving a bit more time and a few extra steps.

Mrs. D. H. M.

WINDOW SILL FLOWERS

DEAR HELOISE:

When your aluminum-covered rubber stove mat needs replacing, don't throw it out!

Cut the mat lengthwise, the width of your window sill, and it makes a marvelous protective mat (with built-in drainage) under flower pots, vases, etc.

C. DeArmit

EGGS ON THE MOVE

DEAR HELOISE:

Have you ever been frustrated carrying raw eggs in a picnic basket, or tried to figure how your son could carry fragile eggs in his pack on a Boy Scout camping trip without having a smashed, sticky mess?

Well, why not break them to begin with?

Six or more eggs can be broken into an empty peanut-butter jar, and nine out of ten times the yolks will stay whole. If not, scrambled eggs are in order!

At least you won't have that aforementioned mess!

Dee

A PIECE OF CAKE

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's my timesaver:

I always cut two or three slices from each cake I bake or buy. I wrap these extra slices in aluminum foil (individually) and freeze them.

Company coming?

Mrs. D. Polin

Heloise

DECORATIVE FIGURES

DEAR HELOISE:

When you have finished papering or painting a room, just write down on a piece of paper the number of rolls it took, or the number of quarts of paint you have used, and tape it to the top edge of a door frame.

When you want to redecorate that room again, all you have to do is look under the tape and there you will have all the necessary info. Saves wasted paint, paper, etc.

Maggie

SWEETER BLEND

DEAR HELOISE:

The finest powdered sugar can be made from granulated sugar by using your blender.

Just turn your blender on high, gradually pour the granulated sugar in, and cover the top. Result—beautiful powdered sugar which can be made as it is needed with no more hard lumps to worry about.

Mrs. J. P.

Heloise

THAT NET AGAIN!

DEAR HELOISE:

A new use for nylon net is to clean screen doors. Just rub the net over the screen and it cleans it faster than any brush or broom!
